

THE FRY FAMILY TREE

Amended in 2021

This family tree was originally researched and recorded by David Fry of Tunbridge Wells.

David made the results of his research available to us at Frenchay Village Museum, with the express purpose of making it available to anyone interested in the Fry family. This we have endeavored to do by adding it to our website as a free resource.

It also shows many other families and in this 2021 version features well over 2000 individuals and more than 500 family names

Sadly, this research is published posthumously, as David died in the Spring of 2014. We, and family historians everywhere, owe a great debt of thanks to David and his family – his wife Jackie and daughter Nina and her husband Zach - for the efforts they made to ensure we were able to make this information available.

Introduction to 2021 Edition.

In 2021 further information came from David Irwin who was researching a relative, Edith Elinor Williams, who had married Henry Oliver Fry. He sent us updated information, and the relevant entry has been amended in italicised text.

82. ii. HENRY OLIVER FRY was born on 21 Feb 1863 in Westbury on Trym, Bristol. He died in 1933 and is buried in Ryde, Isle of Wight. He married Edith Elinor Williams, daughter of William Williams (1817-1896) and Elizabeth Milner Jones (1836-1898), on 12 Jul 1890. Edith was baptised 12 Oct 1864 in Newport, Monmouthshire, Wales

Notes for Edith E Williams:

Only Daughter of William Williams and his third wife

Henry Oliver Fry and Edith Elinor Williams had the following children:

MARGARET FRY was born on 09 Feb 1891. She died Quarter 1, 1977 in Bristol. She was a Sister of Charity.

RICHARD OLIVER FRY was born on 06 Dec 1892 in Clifton and baptized 23 Apr 1893 in St Mary, Leigh Woods, Bristol, Somerset. His father was described as an Iron Merchant. He died in 30 Mar 1960 at Hythe, Kent.. He married Dorothy Baynes in 1944 in Westminster. She was born about 1892.

David Fry

David Fry was born on 4th January 1940 in Shoreham, Sussex. He married Jacqueline Woodward (Jackie) in 1967 in Reading, Berkshire, and their daughter Nina was born in 1970.

In the 1990s, with Jackie's invaluable help, David started researching his ancestors, and he went to extraordinary lengths to ensure the accuracy of his findings. The results of his many years of research is not just a list of names and relationships, but copious notes on where the information came from, and reports of visits made to confirm facts. He visited Frenchay on several occasions, most notably in 2003, when events were held to mark the 275th anniversary of the founding of J S Fry & Sons, the famous chocolate manufacturer. David's research had shown that the firm's founder, Dr. Joseph Fry, was his 1st Cousin 7 times removed.

Sadly, David died on 16th May 2014 in Tunbridge Wells, Kent.

Just before his death David told us that he wanted the fruits of his research to come to Frenchay Village Museum, and we are grateful to his family who made sure this happened. In the Spring of 2015 we collected boxes of paper records from Jackie, which covered some twenty years of research, and in August 2015 Jackie, with her daughter Nina and son-in-law Zach came to Frenchay with a box of discs containing David's "Family Tree Maker" backup files. The latest of these has been used to generate the pdf file "Fry Family Tree", which is on this website.

We are very grateful to David and his family for entrusting us with his research, a lasting legacy that will be invaluable to researchers around the world, now and in the future.

The photograph above of David and Jackie was taken on the occasion of his 60th birthday.

Note: According to The Family History Magazine the Civil War was between 1642 and 1650 and The Society of Friends was established in 1647 by George Fox.

2001...20 June...At Bristol Records Office/Archives of J.S.Fry & Sons/ Notes on the Pedigree of the Family of Fry, by Sir John Pease Fry, Page 1& 2, it says...Living within the sphere of influence of the Great Abbey of Malmesbury, it is probable that the Frys, like so many other English freeman in mediaeval times, suffered at the hands both of the Church and Crown, and had little love for either, a trait long noticeable in our own and other branches of the family, and particularly prominent in the history of John Fry [1609-1657], the regicide member for Dorsetshire in the Long Parliament, who himself had probably a Wiltshire origin and whose family was possibly connected with our own. William Fry, of Sutton Benger [1627-1698], a sturdy Puritan, was one of the earliest adherents of George Fox, and a century later we find Joseph Fry, of Bristol [1728-1787], displaying the same characteristic family tendencies [see Latimer's "Annals of Bristol," p. 178].

This is the FIRST ZEPHANIAH and OUR SEVENTH GREAT GRANDFATHER

1719...31 November & 7th December...The following members of the Fry Family attended the Marriage of Jacob Young and Mary Smart. We found the Marriage entry showing them as Witnesses at the FRC on the 4th October 2001 when we visited there. The Reference was RG6/ 1539/029/25. The Witnesses were William Fry, Zeph Fry, Richard Fry, Margaret Fry & Mary Fry. This 'Zeph' had to be the one because 'Zeph' his son had died in 1716.

2000...October...According to The Dictionary of National Biography, 1912-1921, pages 200, for Sir Edward Fry, [Born November 1827, Died 1918] it says' he was a member of a 'Long established Wessex Family at Corston, near Malmesbury, who followed George Fox and was imprisoned as a Recalcitrant Quaker in 1684'. We will try to find out about this. TD list 20/10/2001**

...1....Their son... Zephaniah... went off and produced the 'Clothier [or 'Clothes ']' line that we are descended from.

...2....Their son... John went off and produced Dr. Joseph of 'Fry's Chocolate' fame

2001... January 5...According to Lincoln'n Inn Library who sent us Chapter 1 of 'A Memoir of Sir Edward Fry, by his Daughter Agnes [printed in 1921], " The family appears to have maintained itself at Corston until the times of the Civil War, when it seems that they lost their property and migrated a few miles to the village of Sutton Benger, where one of the family- by name Zephaniah-became a follower of George Fox, and in 1684 'was taken at a meeting of the Quakers' and' was tendered the oath of allegiance, and for refusing to swear was imprisoned for three months" [2] Besse's Sufferings of The Quakers, published 1753.

According to The Family History Magazine the Civil War was between 1642 and 1650 and The Society of Friends was established in 1647 by George Fox.

AN 27041018/ M0003610AN/ B20853 / Biography [50 Pages], it says on page 1..." Whether born a Quaker or not, we know that he was one in 1683, when he was 25, for his name appears in a list of Friends arrested by one, Thomas Stokes, Church Warden of "Konton" [sic] [Keynsham?]. Attendance of meetings for worship was illegal under the Conventicle Act. He was ordered to take the Oath of Allegiance. This was refused, Quakers following literally the command 'Swear not at all', and he was sent to prison in Ilchester Gaol for three months, a mild sentence for those days"...

2001...4 October...At the FRC, see above 1719 for details of what we found this day.

2003...27 March...Jackie & I visit Sutton Benger Post Office and purchase the book "Sutton Benger, by Kay S Taylor...Extracts from the Book "Sutton Benger from Saxon Times to the Dawn of the 21st Century, by Kay S. Taylor."Page 17...Religious refugees from the continent, many of whom were in the textile industry, chose to settle in towns such as Trowbridge, Chippenham, and Bradford-on-Avon, which were centres of the Wiltshire clothing trade.There is some correlation between the clothing towns and the areas in which Quakerism flourished. The seventeenth century clothier, Zephaniah Fry, embraced the doctrines of the new Society of Friends, with his home in Sutton Benger becoming a centre of Quakerism... In 1727 the newly built home of Zephaniah's son John, now the Vintage Inn in Seagry Road, was given a certificate of registration as a Quaker Meeting House. It was John's son Joseph who moved to Bristol where he founded the Fry's Chocolate Factory...Quakers were still much in evidence, although the Rev Davies had poor opinion of them. He provided the information that there were about seven known Quakers in two families of low degree... As already noted above, a century earlier the Quakers in Sutton Benger had been leading members of the community, with wealthy clothier Zephaniah Fry being a prominent figure in the North Wiltshire Society of Friends.... Not all the eighteenth century Quakers here were such humble stock as the Rev Davies implied, as Zephaniah's descendant John Fry was still active among them, and had published a book of Selected poems containing Religious Epistles etc. which was prefaced "Sutton Benger 25 March 1774"...

2003...28 June ...Whilst on holiday, Jackie & I visit Ilchester, a tiny Town, which, for 500 years was the County Town of Somerset. We visited the Museum and found details of the Jail that had been there, until it was demolished about 1846. The only sign of the Prison now is the long wall that fronts onto the river. We are awaiting any details from the Curator of the Museum.

.....It says on page 1 & 2 ...Zephaniah married Jane Smith in 1686, of whom I know nothing. They had eight children, four sons and four daughters. Their youngest son, John (1701-1775) thus describes their home in "the little village" of Sutton Benger "quite in the country", as it still is:-

"Here first I breathed and so became the care Of an industrious, frugal, pious pair;
And providence, propitious, deigned to bless
Their outward labours with deserved success."

Zephaniah was, as was his father before him, engaged in the cloth trade. A letter to his son, John, then an apprentice in London, dated 1717, speaks of sending worsted yarn with which he is to "desire thy Aunt to knit thy hosen".

Generation 8 (con't)

We are descended from this John, the youngest of the four sons, born in 1701. He wrote and published several little books of verse and, in one, records autobiographical details. He writes that "when suitable (say at 13 or 14) I was removed from home" and "planted in the great metropolis", where he often wanted the advice and help of his parents "amidst the hurries and the strife of trade, I found myself alone "deprived of outward help, no counsellor at hand". He then turned for help to "his parents' God" and realised that he must leave London. He seems to have done this on his marriage with Mary Storrs in 1726, when he was only 25; yet in some verses entitled "A Resolution Realized" written some years before this date he describes himself as "blest in his present condition", not wishing either for riches or "for more business because of its cares", but intending to use thankfully "what the bounty of heaven has furnished as needful, not sparingly given". One wonders how this youth of, say 22 or 23, could have made sufficient savings on which to live simply for the rest of his life. There is no indication of the nature of his business. The dates seem to be about 1715 to 1726 - almost exactly those of the unquiet years of the reign of George 1st. In 1720-21 London was distracted by the South Sea Bubble. Did John Fry speculate successfully in the shares? Many Quakers, it is recorded, managed to lose their money in it! (N.B. I am informed that in the 18th Century it was quite common for a man to take shares in a ship and, if the voyage proved successful, to find himself suddenly a rich man.)

So in 1726, when he was 25, he could contemplate marriage with Mary Storrs, daughter of Joseph Storrs of Chesterfield, and build a small house in Sutton Benger. It still stands, with their initials "J.M.F." and the date, 1726, over what was the door. He tells us how he "retired from trade to a still, quiet life" "withonly one servant, myself and my wife, to a rural, convenient and good habitation.

"And what time I don't in my duty employ, With my garden, my books and my pen I enjoy,
Save in rides and in walks; and I then contemplate,
How seldom such favours are known by the great."

So John and Mary, at 25 and 23, settled down, as they hoped, to life-long "peace and content". But who was Mary Storrs?

My cousin, Gervase Ford of Leeds, sent me recently some family records and among them I found a number of letters copied by his mother, Elizabeth Storrs Walker. These letters are from Brooklyn, New York, U.S.A., and are dated January 26th 1863. From them it appears that one, Samuel Storrs of Sutton, in Nottinghamshire, son of Thomas Storrs of Sutton, near Mansfield, emigrated to America in 1683, and named the Settlement which he founded in Connecticut "Mansfield". All the bearers of the name in America trace their descent to him, and they all hold a family tradition that they are descended from a Philip du Storrs who came to England with the Conqueror in 1066 and was Provider or Taster or Keeper of Stores to the King. Some of these American Storrs came to England in the 1870's, traced their ancestors to the district between Mansfield and Sheffield, and made enquiries of the Herald's Office in England, which confirmed the tradition "All of the name of Storrs are descended from Philip du Storrs who came to England with the Conqueror." The estate of Storrs Hall, near Windermere in Lancashire, was held by the family for centuries, but has died out. However, the evidence seems clear that a branch migrated to Nottinghamshire. The American visitors found a tablet in the church at Sutton, near Mansfield, to the memory of Cordell Storrs, 1698. This name, in the form "Cordial Storrs" re-appears in the Connecticut family several times. Elizabeth Storrs Walker adds a pedigree showing her descent from a Cordell Storrs. His son, William Storrs of Chesterfield, born in 1638, must have become a convert to Quakerism. He had several children - a son, Joseph Storrs, born 1670, whose daughter Mary, born 1703, married John Fry of Sutton Benger in 1726; and another son, John Storrs, is the ancestor of Elizabeth Storrs Ford (nee Walker).

So Mary, in her quiet home in Wiltshire, could claim an interesting descent, and handed on the names of her father, Joseph, for four generations.

Four sons were born to John and Mary Fry between 1728 and 1737.

It is sad to relate that the happiness they anticipated was, it seems, not fully achieved.

Generation 8 (con't)

John Fry laboured in the unpaid ministry of the Society of Friends, and he must have taken an active part in its business for he was four times Clerk to London Yearly Meeting, in 1746, 1751 and 1756.

The yearly meeting, which has been held in London each year for some 250 years, is the highest authority in the Society - representing all the "particular" meetings; but also attended by any members who wish to be present. The Clerk is both Chairman and Secretary. No vote is ever taken but the Clerk sums up the "sense of the meeting" in minutes which he reads aloud. They are not recorded till it is clear they accord with the "weight" of the meeting - a slow but very effective manner of conducting business. The Clerk must obviously be a person of exceptional ability. John Fry would have rejoiced to know that his great, great grandson, Joseph Storrs Fry (1826-1913), held the office thirteen times - a longer record than that of any Friend in the history of the society.

But a poem, dated 1764, speaks of much discouragement:-

"Thus having laboured nearly forty years, Yet to the church small benefit accrue" ..
"With peace I can't from labouring refrain,
But leave the event and faithful hope to be Till death shall terminate the work and me."

The poem is addressed to a friend and he goes on:-

"Consider first my inward tribulations My outward trials next and provocations My native heat of temper - how inclined Unto an active, lively, busy mind.
Each soul knows best its inward bitterness
And sees the cause of all its own distress."

In the second half of the 18th Century the Society of Friends was affected by the prevalent dryness of religious thought, numbers were falling, few new converts were made. Many were influenced by the deism of the day, and those who were faithful were, for the most part, quietists, whose religion was a personal matter, not to be spoken of, while they laid stress on outward customs, peculiarities of dress, language and behaviour. The enthusiasm of the 17th Century had died out.

It seems possible that John Fry's lively mind inclined him to doubt. He himself described his ministry as giving advice, cautions, information. I have found in his verses no allusions to Christ, the Evangelical revival which was to transform the Society in the 19th Century was not yet.

One source of disappointment was that three of his four sons moved to London or Bristol, cities "where I could no freedom find nor there reside with any peace of mind."

Of Joseph, the oldest, I will write fully. William Storrs, the second son, born in 1736, went to London, became a Tea and Spice merchant and banker, with great warehouses in Mildred Court in the city, and, before his elder son. Joseph, married Elizabeth Gurney of Earlham in 1800, had moved to Plashot, the beautiful estate in West Ham which was, on his death, to become the home of Joseph and Elizabeth Fry. It is now built over. The youngest son, Cornelius, was in business in Bristol, I believe in Mary-le-Port Street. Daughters of his married into the Ash and Ball families.

Their father was not able to enjoy their successful careers. In a poem "to his Children written in the 75th year of his age" (they were then almost in middle age) he warns them against the World, the Flesh and the Devil, dwelling in neat verse on each, and then goes on:-

"There is another danger often near .. Which is (I doubt) you are too much employed In commerce, for true peace to be enjoyed."

Generation 8 (con't)

After an earnest exhortation to the religious life, "Tis God alone who gives an inward sense of all our daily wants" -

"For if luke-warmness over us prevail
The vitals of religion soon will fail."

He goes on:-

"Let all your acts be over understood
That your design alone is doing good;
And let not your intentions be confined
But move with courteous stop to all mankind From foolish waste and avarice refrain
But give with liberal hand your honest gain, Avoid extremes whenever they appear And in the middle path you'll surely steer."

These verses are dated 1775. John Fry died on September 18th of that year, and Mary only survived him till November 17th. There are several references in the poem to that "virtuous and religious wife."

In the character of this good man one seems to notice traits which re-appear in his descendants - market business ability, little worldly ambition, a determination to carry out a plan of life which satisfied the conscience, a mind rather analytical than constructive, and a self criticism which led to a dislike of notoriety.

He speaks of "a natural heat of temper", but his was perhaps not incompatible with an emotional coolness and inability to experience emotional piety or to convey it to others.

There is a 17th Century oak linen chest in our possession which once stood in the Sutton Benger home.

John and Mary's son Joseph Fry, was born on June 16th 1728 at Sutton Benger. He was apprenticed to Henry Portsmouth, M.D. of Basingstoke, but did not proceed to Edinburgh as so many 18th Century Quakers did, to take his Degree, as it was the only University which did not impose a religious test on its members. Perhaps John Fry's modest means prevented a University education for this able son. Henry Portsmouth, whom a surviving common-place book shows to have been a most systematic reader, had two daughters - the older, Anna, became the wife of Joseph Fry. Of the younger I came across this story. James Logan, a young school-master who went with William Penn from Bristol to Pennsylvania as his secretary in 1698 and eventually became Deputy Governor of the Colony, had a grandson, William, who was sent to England to study under Henry Portsmouth at Basingstoke. This youth made what is described as "a run-away match" with the doctor's younger daughter. It is recorded in the Journal of John Woolman, the Quaker Saint, that in 1772, when he was voyaging from America to England, he went from the steerage to the cabin during a violent storm to calm the terror of the cabin passengers. Among them was a young widow travelling home to England with her baby. She was Anna Fry's sister. Her son, William Portsmouth Logan, grew up in England but died as a young man. There is, in Philadelphia, a number of letters from Joseph and Anna Fry in the possession of a solicitor, William Logan Fox. The Logan replies must, I think, once have been at Union Street. Mr Fox wrote to me asking for information about them, but I failed to obtain it.

At the conclusion of his apprenticeship, about 1750, Joseph Fry set up as an apothecary in Small Street, Bristol. He would be about 22. He was admitted a Freeman of the city in 1753. He was generally called Dr Fry, as apothecaries often were in the 18th Century, "and his affable and courteous manner and sound Christian principles soon secured him a large practice among the highest class of his fellow citizens."

Dr Arthur Raistrick, of King's College, Newcastle, in his recent book "Quakers in Science and Industry" describes Joseph Fry as a typical Friend of the period, with scholarly interests and alert mind which linked him with many industrial interests in and around his home town - chocolate, type-founding, china, soap boiling and chemical production. He married Anna Portsmouth about 1754. A friend sent me lately a cutting from a Bristol newspaper of 1778. Anna had sent to it a rhyme about Friends at the Friars Meeting House, beginning - "Fire, fire, cried Sammy Dyer, Where, where quoth Jacob Player", and so on, rhyming on some dozen names. It suggests a cheerful authoress.

Joseph Fry is stated to have been a good chemist for his day and this knowledge served him in his various ventures of chocolate making, which dates from his purchase of Churchman's patent, and grew out of his chocolate making for his patients, and in the soap boiling business.

A note in Dr Raistrick's book indicates that in 1761 the Frys were living in Narrow Wine Street and that he, a man not yet 40, was already in partnership with Alderman Fripp in the soap boiling firm of "Fry, Fripp & Co.", a firm which passed into the hands of Christopher Thomas and finally, in the 20th Century, into that of Levers.

His partnership with Richard Champion - then a Quaker - was not of long duration. The Bristol China works only ran for a few years. Perhaps when it was wound up the remaining stock was distributed among the partners. Joseph's grandson, Francis Fry, had a fine collection of Bristol china, some of which he inherited.

I have no note of the date at which he established his chemical works at Battersea..

Perhaps the most interesting of Joseph Fry's many ventures was the Type Founding. He became a partner in the firm of Fry and Pine in Bristol. Pine was also a printer and printed in Bristol four very fine editions of the Bible and Folio and Quarto from their own type.

About 1770 the business was removed to London and, after working with another firm, it became "Joseph Fry & Son, Letter Founders to the Prince of Wales." The son was J.F.'s second son, Edmund, who had taken a Medical Degree (presumably at Edinburgh) but did not practise medicine, and became well known as a type founder. He made type for the oriental languages into which the Bible Society was translating the Scriptures in the early 19th Century. I do not know whether the printing firm of his great nephew, John Fry, derived from this. John Fry, in partnership with his brother-in-law, Robert Barclay, invented the method of minute printings on cheques which is so familiar today.

Joseph Fry died, after a short illness, in 1787 in his 58th year. His funeral at the Friars Meeting House was very largely attended by his fellow citizens.

The Frys were lifelong and loyal members of the Society of Friends. I have two books belonging to them - a copy of William Law's Letters, inscribed "Joseph Fry, Apothecary," and a copy of the Life of Madame Guyon, the 17th Century French mystic, which belonged to Anna Fry when she resided in Berkeley Square. These books suggest that it was the 17th Century mysticism of the first Quakers which interested them. The evangelical revival of the 19th Century was not yet.

The large miniature of Anna Fry, dated 1781, when she was about 50, is that of a plain woman with a clever face and good carriage.

The silhouette of her husband is that of a plain man, with a large head, high forehead, bob wig, a very prominent thin aquilino nose, curiously full lips and double chin.

Joseph and Anna Fry had three sons and four daughters, two of whom died as children, and the youngest a year after her marriage. The only surviving daughter, Sarah, was unmarried and well remembered as my grandfather's loved aunt. When Joseph Fry died in 1787 his two elder sons, Henry and Edmund, were over 30 and already established in London. His youngest son, Joseph Storrs Fry, was only 20 and the Bristol business descended to him. He went into partnership with his mother, and the firm was "Anna Fry & Son" till 1795. In the following section I shall say something of this life of my great grandfather, principally recording some family tradition about him.

In the small portrait of him by Branwhite it is not easy to trace any resemblance to either of his parents. The large, somewhat round forehead surrounded by neat silver-grey hair, the well set, large grey eyes, the straight nose and small delicate mouth and chin, certainly descended to some of his grand-children. My mother writes of him - "He was a very clever man - kind - hospitable and generous. He had a good deal of humour and enjoyed a droll story. Though so kind, I believe he made people, who were not pretty quick-witted, afraid of him. He had an original mind and was very unconventional in thought and action." My mother goes on to describe his religious attitude. He was much attracted to the Evangelical aspect of Christian doctrine, though remaining a convinced Quaker. Records of his last days "give the impression of a man of a very independent and real character, who disliked any sort of forced sentiment - who would have been the last to force his thoughts and words into any conventional channel."

He inherited the business capacity of his father. In the letter addressed to the Secretary of the Royal Society of Arts, which I have already quoted, he speaks of having resided at Bolingbroke House, Battersea. He must have been sent there as a boy to learn chemistry at his father's Chemical works in Battersea. He writes in 1792, when he was 25, enquiring whether the Society continues their premium for the improvement of Cranes for Wharves. "I have a plan which I should have put in practice before this time but my various engagements have prevented. I have no doubt but it will answer every aim of the Society. I believe the cranes on our wharves are as perfect as any in the country - but they have no contrivance to shift their powers, of course they are nearly as long raising five cwt as fifty."

PART OF 39

J.S. Fry's most intimate friend was his cousin, Dr Gawen Ball. They often met and would, I have been told, retire, after others had gone to bed, to the kitchen, there to enjoy their churchwarden pipes over the fire and to tell and re-tell each other their old stories and familiar jokes. Two of their rhymes, whether made up by them I do now know, were these:-

"To pay your debt be very slow For oft it may befall
That by some lucky hit or go, You need not pay at all."

and

"Tis a very good world that we live in,
To spend, or to lend, or to give in,
But to borrow or beg, or keep a man's own 'Tis the very worst world that ever was known."

My other notes of J.S.F. are embodied in the following record of his wife.

Page 17...Religious refugees from the continent, many of whom were in the textile industry, chose to settle in towns such as Trowbridge, Chippenham, and Bradford-on-Avon, which were centres of the Wiltshire clothing trade.There is some correlation between the clothing towns and the areas in which Quakerism flourished. The seventeenth century clothier, Zephaniah Fry, embraced the doctrines of the new Society of Friends, with his home in Sutton Benger becoming a centre of Quakerism... In 1727 the newly built home of Zephaniah's son John, now the Vintage Inn in Seagry Road, was given a certificate of registration as a Quaker Meeting House. It was John's son Joseph who moved to Bristol where he founded the Fry's Chocolate Factory...Quakers were still much in evidence, although the Rev Davies had poor opinion of them. He provided the information that there were about seven known Quakers in two families of low degree... As already noted above, a century earlier the Quakers in Sutton Benger had been leading members of the community, with wealthy clothier Zephaniah Fry being a prominent figure in the North Wiltshire Society of Friends.... Not all the eighteenth century Quakers here were such humble stock as the Rev Davies implied, as Zephaniah's descendant John Fry was still active among them, and had published a book of Selected poems containing Religious Epistles etc. which was prefaced "Sutton Benger 25 March 1774"....

Dr. Joseph Fry

Born 16 March 1728. Died 29 March 1787

Eldest Son of John Fry, of Sutton Benger, Wiltshire.

Typesetter, and Author of 'Select Poems,' 1774, 4th edition, 1793. He was educated in the North of England, and afterwards bound apprentice to Henry Portsmouth of Basingstoke, an eminent Doctor [Gentlemen's Magazine 1787, vol. [vii. Pt. I. P. 385], whose eldest daughter, Anna, he afterwards married.

He was the first member of his family to settle in Bristol, where he acquired a considerable medical practice, and 'was led to take a part in many new scientific undertakings' [Hugh Owen, Two Centuries of Ceramic Art in Bristol, 1873, page 218].

After a time he abandoned Medicine for business pursuits. He helped Richard Champion in his Bristol China Works, and began to make chocolate, having purchased Churchman's Patent Right. The Chocolate and Cocoa manufactory thus started has been carried on by the family down to the present day.

The success of John Baskerville caused Fry to turn his attention, in 1764, to 'Type-founding,' and he entered into partnership with William Pine, the first printer of the 'Bristol Gazette,' who had a large business in Wine Street.

Their new type may be traced in several works issued between 1764 and 1770. The manager of Messrs. Fry & Pine was Isaac Moore, formerly a Whitesmith at Birmingham [E. Rowe Mores, Dissertation upon English Typogr. Founders, 1778, page 83], after whose speedy admission to Partnership the business was removed to London, and carried on as 'Isaac Moore & Co, in Queen Street, near Upper Moorfields.'

Luckombe mentions Moore as one of three London Founders [History of Printing, 1770, page 244]. In 1774 the London firm produced a fine folio Bible, and in 1774-1776 a well-printed edition in 5 volumes. About this time they somewhat abandoned their earlier Baskerville style of letter, to follow the more popular Caslon character. In 1774 Pine printed in Bristol, a Bible in a pearl type, asserted to be 'the smallest a Bible was ever printed with.' To all these editions notes were added to escape the penalty of infringing the patent.

Two years later the firm became J. Fry & Co., and issued in 1777 reprints of the octavo and folio Bibles. Pine subsequently withdrew entirely. Fry took his sons, Edmund [died 1835] and Henry, into partnership in 1782, and bought largely at the sale of James's Foundry in that year. The business was removed to Worship Street, where in 1785 was issued 'A Specimen of Printing Types made by Joseph Fry & Sons, Letter-Founders and Marking Instrument Makers by the Kings Royal Letters Patent.' In the advertisement the proprietors 'flatter themselves' that the types which are now called new 'will mix with, and be totally unknown from, the most approved founts made by the late ingenious artist, William Caslon.'

The next year they published another 'Specimen,' with new founts, and including seven pages of oriental types. They now called themselves 'Letter-founders to the Prince of Wales.' Up to the time of his death Fry was a partner with Alderman William Fripp, as Fry, Fripp, & Co., Soap Boilers. This business is now in the hands of Christopher Thomas Brothers. Fry also had some chemical works at Battersea, in which his son assisted him.

Fry died after a few days illness on the 29th March 1787, age 59, having retired from business a short time before. Like his Father and Grandfather he was a member of the Society of Friends, and was buried at the Friars, Bristol. After his death the Chocolate and Cocoa manufactory was carried on by his widow under the style of Anna Fry & Son. The previous title had been Fry, Vaughan & Co. In 1795 the works were removed from Newgate Street, Bristol to Union Street, Bristol, where a Watt's Steam Engine was erected, the first in Bristol.

The son was Joseph Storrs Fry [1766- 1835], whose three sons, Joseph, Francis [1803-1866] and Richard were subsequently joined with him as J.S. Fry & Sons, the name the firm has since born. His widow was associated for a short time with her sons in the Type-foundry. She died at Charterhouse Square, London, on the 22nd October 1803, age 83.

An Interesting Eighteenth Century Document.

Bristol Manufacturers Memorial.

We give below a copy of an Eighteenth Century Bristol document which may be regarded as of unique interest, on account of the circumstances which called it forth, the official attention which was given to it, and the extent to which, with certain parts of it, modern needs for Legislation are anticipated in it. The Sender of the memorial [Mr Joseph Fry] was born in 1723, and he was the Great Grandfather of the present Chairman of the eminent firm in Union Street. The memorial is endorsed by the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, and it is referred to the Commissioners of Excise for consideration and report. The full report on the memorial made by the Commissioners of Excise is dated June 27th 1776. The memorial was as follows: -

Treas. Board Papers. 1776. Bdle. 448.

To The Right Honourable The Lords Commissioners of The Treasury.

The Humble Memorial of Joseph Fry. of Bristol, Maker of Chocolate.

Sheweth

That the trading vessels from Ireland to Wales, Bristol, and many other parts of England, bring over very large quantities of chocolate, which is of a quality equal to much that is made in England, and is now become greatly in repute. It is sold publickly, and even daily hawked about the streets of Bristol, Bath, Salisbury, Worcester, and Birmingham, to the great diminution of his trade in those and many other places.

That in a clause in a late Act concerning hawkers a penalty of ten pounds is imposed on any person who shall hawk about tea, tho' he may have a permit with it; but Chocolate, altho' it pays two shillings and three pence per pound excise, besides about ten shillings per hundredweight on the Cocoa Nuts from which it is made [which is more than is paid on some sorts of Tea], is nevertheless not included in the said Clause, which your Memorialist presumes was an oversight, as it would certainly have been great check both to buyer and seller.

That the officers on Bristol tho' they do, or may know the Hawkers of this article, have several times assured your Memorialist they shall not take any notice of them, or it, in future, because they have made many seizures and at one time above five hundred pounds weight on which they paid considerable expenses, but that they not only never received any gratuity for making the seizure, but were never repaid the money they were actually out of pocket for carriage to London, packages, &c.

Your Memorialist therefore with much deference proposes, that such Chocolate as may be seized in future, and shall be condemned may be sold as Brandy is, for as much as it will yield, and without first reserving the Duty of 2s 3d per pound, which would make the officers vigilant [sic] and active to prevent smuggling.

That it appears clearly to your Memorialist and to many who have attended to the subject of this memorial, that if one shilling or at least nine pence were to be taken from the present Excise Duty, and instead thereof seven shillings were to be paid on every hundredweight of Cocoa Nuts, when made into chocolate, which would be about six pence per pound on the shells they would produce, this practice of smuggling would be much diminished and the lowering the price of Chocolate would proportionately increase the sale. As it is certain that good and beautiful Chocolate cannot be made in warm climates, and that abroad the English chocolate is preferr'd to most if not any other sort, doubtless very large quantities would be exported to the East and West Indies and many other places, if a suitable Drawback were to be allowed on Exportation, which if it were to be granted and the Duty now paid on the Importation of the Nuts were to remain, together with the above mentioned seven shillings, and three pence per pound of the Excise Duty, it would amount to above five pence per pound on all that should be exported, even tho' it should partly be run back into the nation again, whereas what is now smuggled pays nothing.

To avoid countenancing fraud, by leaving the stamps of Inland Duty on exported Chocolate, it is humbly proposed that they should not be put on at all, but Devices of different kinds, for those intended for exportation, and those to be used for home consumption.

Generation 9 (con't)

It may perhaps not be amiss to observe to your Lordships that within about two years past smuggling is vastly increased in Bristol, and for many miles round, by a desperate Gang of Villains, who distribute immense Quantities of excisable Goods in those parts.

As is expected some alterations are likely to be made respecting Coffee or Tea, it is hoped the above may properly be considered at the same time.

All which is humbly submitted to your Lordships' consideration, to make such provision therein as may be most advantageous for securing the revenues and extending the trade.

Joseph Fry. Whitehall

Elizabeth Fry, n'ee Gurney, Born 21 May 1780. Died 12 October 1845

Prison Reformer, born at Earlham in Norfolk, was the third daughter of John Gurney, Banker in Norwich, and member of an old Quaker Family. Her younger Brothers included Daniel Gurney and Joseph John Gurney. Elizabeth in youth joined in social gaieties. Under the preaching and influence of an American named Savery she became deeply imoressed by the Gospel. Her earliest work was to visit the poor at Earlham and in Norwich, relieving the sick, and forming a class for the instruction of the children.

At the age of twenty she married Joseph Fry who appears to have been of a much colder and more commonplace nature than his wife. The family was large. Amid all her public labours she never ceased to devote herself to their welfare; it was a great disappointment to her that some of them left The Society of Friends.

Soon after her marriage she was much exercised by the question whether or not she was called to the ministry among her people. Naturally she had an intense aversion to such a work, but on the death of her father, when she was twenty-nine, she was constrained to take part in the public service, and there-after experienced such 'incomings of love, joy, peace,'that she no longer doubted, and was accordingly soon after recognised as a Minister.

She spoke with marvelous effect. The pathos of her voice was almost miraculous, and melted alike the hardest criminals and the most impervious men of the world. Cool observers who had witnessed the effects of her appeals in Newgate Prison could hardly describe the scene without tears.

Her connection with prisons began practically in 1813. As a child of fifteen she had been deeply interested in the House of Correction at Norwich, and had prevailed on her father to allow her to visit it. At the instigation of some of her friends who had come to know of the state of things at Newgate, and particularly of William Forster [1784-1854], she now turned her attention to the condition of the female prisoners. The state of things was appalling. Nearly three hundred women, with their children, were huddled together in two wards and two cells; some of them convicted, some not yet tried, innocent and guilty, misdemeanants and felons, all tumbled together; without employment, without nightclothes or bedclothes, sleeping on the bare floor, cooking and washing, eating and sleeping in the same apartment.

A tap in the prison gave them the opportunity of supplying themselves with drink. Even the Governor was afraid to trust himself in the place, and when the Quakers were about to visit he advised them to leave their watches behind. 'The Begging,' as she afterwards described the scene to a Committee of the House of Commons, 'swearing, gaming, fighting, singing, dancing, dressing up in mens clothes were too bad to be described, so that we did not think it suitable to admit young persons with us.'

At first she tried no more than to supply the most destitute with clothes. Then she established a school, which was very successful. A matron was afterwards appointed. But the main cause of reformation was her personal influence and exertions. The reading of the scriptures was a leading part of her remedial measures, and her impressive tones and profound reverence made a deep impression. She was the heart and soul of an association formed in 1817 for the improvement of female prisoners in Newgate.

The effects of her labours were thus described by the American minister of the day: 'Two days ago I saw the greatest curiosity in London, aye and in England too, compared to which Westminster Abbey, The Tower, Somerset House, the British Museum, nay Parliament itself, sink into utter insignificance. I have seen Elizabeth Fry in Newgate, and I have witnessed there the miraculous effect of true Christianity upon the most depraved of human beings. And yet the wretched outcasts have been tamed and subdued by the Christian eloquence of Mrs. Fry'

Her success attracted the attention of all classes, including Royalty. Transported criminals were sent in those days to New South Wales, and the voyage was performed without classification, employment, or superintendence. At New South Wales no arrangements were made for enabling them to earn an honest living. Mrs. Fry exerted herself greatly to induce the government to make proper regulations for the voyage, and to provide suitable home and proper employment for them on arriving.

She took a lively interest in the condition of other prisons besides Newgate. Sometimes combining her work as a Minister of the Quaker Communion with her prison labours, she would travel through the country, especially visiting places where there were prisons, ascertaining their condition, conferring with the local authorities, making suggestions to them, and forming ladies associations for more effectually carrying out the object.

Her visits, too, extended beyond the limits of the United Kingdom. In 1820 she corresponded with the Princess Mestchersky of Russia; the Dowager-Empress became deeply interested, and her son Nicholas allowed her to convert a Royal Palace into a Palace prison. Mrs. Fry, however, did not desire to encourage such sentimental philanthropy. In France, Louis-Philippe and his Queen received her kindly; so did the King of Prussia and his family. At Kaiserswerth she had the most interesting time; Fliegender owned that her example had moved him greatly; while she was impressed, after visiting Kaiserswerth, with the importance of having trained nurses to attend the sick, and instituted an order of 'nursing sisters,' whose aid has been sought and valued by persons of all classes.

Although prison reform was her chief work, she attended to other questions. She was much impressed by the miseries of homeless wanderers in London during the rigorous winter of 1819-1820, and especially by the death of a poor boy who was found frozen to death on a doorstep. A 'nightly shelter, for the homeless' was the result, soup and bread, as well as a bed, being given to those who applied.

The scheme prospered under a committee of ladies, of whom she was the head, and they did not limit their efforts merely to providing the night's lodging, but tried to find occupation for the unemployed. In like manner finding Brighton to be greatly infested with beggars, she instituted a district visiting society designed to relieve real distress, to prevent mendicity and imposture, and encourage industry.

Observing how the members of the blockade or preventative service were exposed to dreary idleness, she got them a supply of bibles and usefull books, and by-and by libraries were supplied to the preventative stations. A remark on the temptations of discharged prisoners led to the opening, by a lady who heard it, of The Royal Manor Hall Asylum.

In 1828 her husband became bankrupt, and he and his family sank from affluence to poverty. Much suffering was entailed on others, and Mrs. Fry could no longer help the needy as she had been accustomed to do. But she continued her duties as a Minister, in addition to all her philanthropic work and her domestic duties. She was equally at home with all ranks; at one time we find her entertaining the King of Prussia at dinner, at another, drinking tea with a poor shoemaker who had been able to procure but one luxury for her entertainment- a little fresh butter.

She died at Ramsgate on 12th October 1845, and was buried in the Friend's burial- ground at Barking. Mrs. Fry was the author of; 1 'Observations on Female Prisoners,' Lond. 1827. 2. ' Report by Mrs Fry and J.J. Gurney on their late visit to Ireland,' Lond. 1827. 3. Preface of John Venn's 'Sermon on Gradual Progress of Evil,' Lond. 1830. 4. 2000...15 November ...

A Book 'People & Places' [Phyllis Burholt in [November 2000 [has been reading thus ..]

Elizabeth Fry, n'ee Gurney

Quaker & Prison Reformer. The American Ambassador said " I have seen the two Greatest Sights in London, St Pauls Cathedral and Mrs Fry reading to the prisoners of Newgate".

Lord Byron wrote 'Oh, Mrs Fry, why go to Newgate, why? Preach to the poor rogues? And wherefore not begin with Carlton or with other houses your hand at hardened imperial sinto mend the peoples absurdity a jargon, a merely philanthropic din unless you make theirs better I thought you had more religion Mrs Fry, Better -Fy!

She was born a Gurney at Earlam Hall. The Gurney's were 'wide' Quakers. The women did not wear the grey dress & bonnet nor the men the broad brimmed hat. Elizabeth, or Betsy Gurney, the fourth of twelve children, grew up in a hous of red cloaks, purple boots, ponies, hide and seek, in the cupboards, music, dancing to the " dear elatingfiddle, play acting, Republican sentiments and free thinking. To some degree, Betsy was the 'odd man out', a neurotic child, afraid of the dark even in her teens. Afraid of death and the sea- subjectto a reaccuring dream of drowning.

Her periods of depression were known to the family as 'valleys'. Of herself, She wrote in 1797 " I am a bubble, without beauty of mind, or person. I am now 17 and if some kind and great circumstance does not happen to me, I shall have my talents devoured by Moth and Rust"

The great and kind circumstances occurred in February 1798, when William Savery, a Quaker Tanner from Philadelphia, arrived in Norwich on a Religious visit. He found Goats Lane Meeting so unsympathetic that he 'expected to pass the meeting in silent suffering, but at last he was able to speak. After spending the day with him, Elizabeth returned home and wrote in her diary "today I have felt that there is a God".

Soon afterwards she dreamed again of the rushing sea, but she was in a safe place and it could not reach her.

No immediate and drastic change was made in her life. She went to London, called on Mrs. Siddons, went to the "Opera" Mrs. Twiss gave me some paint for the evening. I painted a little; I had my hair dressed and did look pretty for me. Soon afterwards she became a 'plain' friend, wearing a grey costume and talking to thee and thou but it was long before she found the work of her life.

She had married a London Merchant Joseph Fry and bore him eight children before she entered Newgate Prison for the first time in 1813. The commission was brought to her by another American Quaker, the French Émigré, Nobleman Stephen Grellet. On a religious impulse, he had gone to Newgate and was astonished beyond description at the mass of woe and misery which he saw. He begged Elizabeth Fry to do something for the women.

This account of what she found is given by a companion. "The Railing was crowded with half-naked women struggling together for the front positions, with the most boisterous violence and begging with the utmost vociferation. I felt as if I was going into a den of wild beasts. I recollect quite shuddering when the door was closed upon us and we were locked in with such a herd of novel and desperate companions."

But in 1817 Rev. C.B. Taylor had a different story to tell. "I was present when she read a portion of the word of God to the women. There they sat in respectful silence, every eye fixed upon the grave sweet countenance of the gentle lady who was about to address them- never till then and never since then have I heard anyone read as did Elizabeth Fry that chapter".

An enquirer asked her method "I never refer to their past. We have all sinned and come short".

Elizabeth Fry's aims in Prison Reform included separating men from women, classifying prisoners and giving them instruction and employment and with energy, she furthered this programme in France, Germany, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland and Denmark until her influence spread throughout the world.

One of the energetic sociological Saints of the 19th Century, she said before her death. "Since my Heart was touched at seventeen years old, I believe, I have never wakened from sleep, without my first waking thought being best how I could serve the Lord"

Quaker reformers grave lost to history
By Robin Young.

Elizabeth Fry, the Quaker prison reformer who is commemorated on the new £5 note, is buried in an unmarked grave in a grassy park in Barking, East London.

There is nothing at the site to draw attention to the fact that one of the 19th century's most influential women is buried there. A bronze plaque noting the location was stolen from its plinth years ago and has not been replaced.

What had been a Quaker burial ground was taken over by the Barking and Dagenham Council in 1979. The gravestone that had been erected in Mrs Fry's honour was removed to another Quaker Burial Ground at Wanstead, East London, but records at the Friends Meeting House indicate that her body was not moved.

Born to a banking family in Norwich in 1780, Mrs Fry first visited Newgate prison in 1813. From Christmas 1816, despite family difficulties [she bore 11 children], she started regular visits to Newgate and organised the Association for the Improvement of the Female Prisoners in Newgate.. In 1818 she became the first woman to be called to give evidence to a committee of the House of Commons.

An early champion of women's rights and strong opponent of the Death Penalty, she was so well known that she received support from Queen Victoria, and the King of Prussia visited her to learn about the work.

This did not save her from suffering humiliation when in 1828 her husband's bank crashed. Thanks to her brother, her husband's debts were repaid and Mrs Fry received an annual stipend that enabled her to continue her work.

There is a statue of Mrs Fry at the Old Bailey, and a bas relief at Wormwood Scrubs prison. There is also a bust in East Ham Town Hall and a plaque opposite Mansion House in the City of London, at the site of one of her homes.

Captain Cook's childhood home to be sold
By John Naish and Helen Stud

A NORTH YORKSHIRE estate that was once home to Captain Cook and the prison reformer Elizabeth Fry has been put up for sale now that the Fry family's bloodline has now come to an end. The 750-acre estate, which belonged to the Quaker family that became renowned for the manufacture of chocolate, is to be split into several smaller plots under the auctioneer's hammer next month.

The estate was bought by the Fry family at the turn of the 19th century as Elizabeth Fry was beginning her lifelong efforts to improve conditions for jailed women. After her death, Sir Theodore Fry, Mayor of Darlington and a liberal MP in the late 1800's, also lived on the estate.

The property has attracted strong interest from potential buyers, according to Richard Murray Wells, of Smith Gore estate agents. The sale is expected to take the form of sealed bids with a deadline for best and final offers set for the middle of July.

Part of the Roseberry estate which is situated on the edge of the North York Moors national Park, has been donated to the National Trust, but the remaining farm buildings are expected to fetch more than £1 million.

The real PRIZE IS CONSIDERED TO BE Aireyholme Farm, a farmhouse set in 282 acres.

Cook lived there in a tied cottage until he was 16.

Cook was later credited with the discovery of the east coast of Australia. In his three epic voyages he discovered more of the Earth's surface than any other explorer of the 18th century and was equally acclaimed as a scientist, cartographer and surveyor.

The property, which includes outhouses, is expected to be sold separately from the rest of the estate, with an asking price of £290.000

history By Robin Young.

Elizabeth Fry, the Quaker prison reformer who is commemorated on the new £5 note, is buried in an unmarked grave in a grassy park in Barking, East London.

There is nothing at the site to draw attention to the fact that one of the 19th century's most influential women is buried there. A bronze plaque noting the location was stolen from its plinth years ago and has not been replaced.

What had been a Quaker burial ground was taken over by the Barking and Dagenham Council in 1979. The gravestone that had been erected in Mrs Fry's honour was removed to another Quaker Burial Ground at Wanstead, East London, but records at the Friends Meeting House indicate that her body was not moved.

Joseph Fry and Elizabeth Gurney had the following children:

1. KATHARINE¹¹ FRY was born on 22 Aug 1801 (St. Mildred's Court, Poultney, City of London). She died on 09 May 1886.

Notes for Katharine Fry:

2003...26 August... I have just borrowed the Book "Katharine Fry's Book" edited by Jane Vansittart to pages, from the Tunbridge Wells library. On page 11 it says that Katharine began to write this book of reminiscences and intimate family history of both the Fry and the Gurney Families in 1872, when she was seventy-one, and she finished it four years later.

The Book is shown in this collection of records and letters which Katherine gathered into this huge book of over 600 pages.

DR. EDMUND FRY. Born 1754. Died 22nd December 1835 Second Son of Dr. Joseph Fry [1728-1787]

Type-Founder; Was born at Bristol in 1754. He studied medicine; took the degree of M.D. at Edinburgh, and spent some time at St. George's Hospital, London.

In 1782 his Father admitted his two sons, Edmund and Henry, as Partners in the Type-Foundry Business in Queen Street, London. The Father retired in 1787, when the new firm, Edmund Fry & Co, issued their first 'Specimen of Printing Types,' followed the next year by an enlarged edition. Fry cut several Founts of the original type, which fill twelve pages. In 1788 the printing business was separated from the foundry, and remained at Worship Street, as the 'Cicero Press,' under the management of Henry Fry.

The foundry was removed to a place opposite Bunhill Fields in Chiswell Street, and new works erected in a Street then called 'Type Street'. Homer's series of the classics [1789-1794], printed by Millar Ritchie were from the characters of the Type Street foundry. In 1793 'Edmund Fry & Co; letter founders to the Prince of Wales,' produced a 'Specimen of Metal-cast Ornaments curiously adjusted to paper,' which gained vogue among printers.

The next year Fry took Isaac Steel into partnership, and published a 'Specimen' which 'shows a marked advance on its predecessors' [T.B. Reed, Old English Letter Foundries, p.306]

In 1798 he circulated a 'Prospectus' of the great work on which he had been occupied for sixteen years, published as 'Pantographia, containing accurate Copies of all the known Alphabets of the

Generation 10 (con't)

World, together with an English explanation of the peculiar Force of Power of each Letter, to which are added Specimens of all well- authenticated Oral Languages, forming a Comprehensive Digest of Phonology,' 1799,

The volume contains eighteen varieties of the Chaldee and thirty-two of the Greek. Fry expressly cut many of the characters for his book. On the admission of George Knowles in 1799, the firm took the name of Fry, Steele, & Co. At the commencement of the present century the modern-faced type supplanted the old-faced. 'Specimens of modern cut printing typ-es from the foundry of Messrs. Fry & Steele' are given in C. Stower's 'Printers Grammar,' 1808.

About this time Fry reassumed sole management of the business. In 1816 a 'Specimen of Printing Types by Edmund Fry, Letter Founder to the King and Prince Regent,' was published. The firm soon after became Edmund Fry & Son, on the admission of his son Windover. Fry cut several founts of Oriental types for the University of Cambridge, The British and Foreign Bible Society, and other bodies. In a 'Specimen' printed in 1824 the name is changed back to 'Edmund Fry' at ' the Polyglot Foundry.'

In 1828 he endeavoured to dispose of the business, and issued a descriptive circular [see Reed, pp. 310-312]. It was purchased by William Thorowgood of Fann Street, and the stock removed in 1829. It has since been in the hands of Thorowgood & Besley, then R. Besley & Co., and now Sir Charles Reed & Sons.

In 1833 twenty designs for raised type for the blind were submitted to the Royal Scottish Society of Arts, who had offered a prize for the best example. Among them was one from Fry, to whom the Gold Medal was awarded a couple of years after his death [Transactions, 1837,], which took place at Dalby Terrace, City Road, London, at the age of eighty-one, on December 1835.

Fry was one of the most learned of the English typefounders, but retired with a very small competence. He was a member of the Company of Stationers. He was married twice: first to Jenny, daughter of Nicholas Windover, of Stockbridge, Hampshire, of whose issue one son only survived, Windover Fry [1797-1835]; secondly to Ann Hancock, by whom he had a son, Arthur [1809-1878].

A portrait of Fry, painted by Frede'rique Boileau, was shown at the Caxton Exhibition in 1877 [Catalogue, p.336]. A Silhouette has been reproduced by Reed [letter Foundries, p.298] and Fry [Memoir, p.16].

2003...28 March...On a visit to the Frenchay Museum, Bristol today, Alan Freke told us that those who were buried at 'Quaker Friars in the centre of Bristol' were Reinterred.

This was because that burial ground was turned into a car park and some building work done. He found out that the remains were Reinterred in 1965 to the Avonview Cemetery, Blackworth Road, St. George, Bristol. He took us there and we took photos and a video of the New Headstone. Many of our Ancestors were buried at Quaker Friars over the years and this note is being applied to their files so that we know where any remains now rest.

1845...1 October...'Robert' is entered as 'Father of Thomas Dyer Fry on Thomas's Marriage Certificate to Sarah Elizabeth Rowlands. His Occupation is shown as 'Clothier.

3/4/1998...At FRC...Found the 1841 Census for 140, High Street, Hoxton Old Town at Last Ref. HO 107/708 3 Page 5. The houses in the street were not numbered on the census. Bonus is that 'Mary Fry age 70' is living there. This must be Thomas 1 Dyer's Mother. No places of birth are shown. Also there is 'Henrietta Rowlands age 20 a dress maker..Is this William B Rowlands Sister ??

16/4/1998...At FRC...Found the Marriage of Thomas and Sarah on the IGI and Marriage Books again Ref 1 October 1845 Stepney, St. Dunstan Vol 2 509. Have Ordered Certificate. Hopefully this will show both Parents and places of Birth. Also on the IGI Mary Dyer's [many of] , Wiltshire page 4656...no sign or marriage to Robert. Also checked Somerset. Also got copy of Wilts map for 1849. It also Mentions that 'Rwode' was called 'Rode'in The Doomsday Book'.

23/4/1998...Marriage Certificate Received. Shows that Thomas's Father is ROBERT FRY and his occupation is 'Clothier'....Bingo !!!

14/4/1998...Ivor at Nailsea Library....He met Julie Mansfield, North Somerset Archivist of Somerset Record Office; she shows him the following 'Fishe' of Lullington and Rode...Lullington:- D/P/lull 2/2/1,2,3 and Rode:-D/P/rode 2/1/3-12. He scrutinized the following: Baptisms 1712-1716,1718-1722,1729-1767,1753[?], 1770-1782: Christenings:- 1799-1803 & Baptism:-1812. Also the following Burials 1714-1729[no 1716 burial]....1741-1742, 1756-1763 and 1812. He said he did not complete D/P/lull 2/2/1... He did not find any Fry's.

25/6/1998...At FRC...No trace of Robert [Charles] Fry on IGI 1992 edition for Gloucestershire
25/6/1998...At FRC,,,No trace of Robert [Charles] Fry on IGI 1992 edition for Dorsetshire.

28/8/1998...At FRC...Found Robert Fry on IGI 1992 Page 5610 Wiltshire at Broughton Gifford, Christened on 25 December 1771. He is the son of Joseph and Betty Fry. Also find Joseph C; 24/6/1770 page 5596. George C; 23/8/1773 or 8 on page 5582. Martha C; 25/12/1776 page 5599. Thomas C; 6/8/1778 page 5610. There may be others.

30/8/1998...wrote to Wilts Archives re Broughton Gifford

4/9/1998...Wilts Archives supply copy of Baptism Record of Robert on 25 December 1771 at Broughton Gifford, Nr Melksham, Wilts, son of Joseph and Betty. Wilts say Robert Fry is the ONLY Robert Fry baptized there.

8/9/1998...Telephoned Revd.Hogarth, 8, Church St, Beckington, Bath, Somerset, BA3 6TG, Phone 01373-830314. Somerset Archives told me he is the keeper of the Registers of Lullington. He was very helpful, and arranged to take us to the church at Lullington.

11/9/1998...Revd. Alan Hogarth took us through Beckington, a small village of only a hundred or so residents and he told us that this used to be a very prosperous village in the 18th century involved in the "Production of Cloth", and pointed out some very grand houses of the period where the wealthy traders lived. This was interesting because Roberts Occupation [detailed on his son Thomas's Marriage Certificate] is 'Clothier'. Beckington was on the important 'Trade Road' of the time and lies 5 miles south of Trowbridge and 3 miles north of Frome. Half a mile north is the village of 'Rode' where son Thomas says he was born, and the 'Unnamed Child of Robert and Mary is buried as per the Rode Parish Register [1805-1812]. Lullington is about 3/4 mile SW of Beckington.

Lullington, Somerset...We arrive in this very tiny village and park outside All Saints Church, which is about 100 yards from the Square, the Centre of which stands the covered Water Pump. The entrance is through a covered gate and a pathway leads to the Centre of the church. The grounds are extremely well tended and on the left are a few graves covered with fresh flowers. These graves are less than 50 years old and are obviously looked after on a regular basis. The Fabric of the church is in very good order and the guttering and downpipes are dated 1872. We are led round the church past the doorway to the North Doorway. This is not used now and is the oldest part of the church which was built between 1070-1100. On entering, the first item seen is the large font which has a Latin inscription. [Further details of the Church, see leaflet.] Revd. Hogarth took us to the vestry and got the registers from the safe. Immediately we found more children of Robert & Mary of Lullington, in the Baptism Register, ie. Henry, Henry Pearce and Isaac that we did not know of. We see the Burial Register and find Henry and Samuel. There is no more mention of Robert & Mary's family after 1818 in any register up to 1850.

Other 'Fry' entries are: Baptism's..1816..June 22..Page 3 entry no 23...Ann, Daughter of George & Eleanor Fry of Lullington. [we have opened a separate Family file for them]

1826...July 30 entry no 79...Samuel James, son of William & Sarah Fry of Lullington, Fathers Profession is ' Manufactory' & 1831...November 28, entry no 97, William Henry, son of William & Sarah Fry of Lullington, profession ' Labourer'. [we have opened a separate Family file for them]

Is George , one of Robert's Brothers from Broughton Gifford.???

Mr Peter Weeks, the Squire of the village from the farm next to the church gave us a potted history of Lullington and said he has the only farm around that still employs 'Estate Workers'. The Village was bought in 1810-1820 by a Mr Cox, a Banker and Lord Bath was a Patron for 2-300 years. The Last patron was a 'Duckworth' who died about 10 years ago. The inside of the church is full of plaques commemorating various 'Duckworths' from the 1800's. William Duckworth restored the Church in 1862. We were shown the very Rare Silver Chalice made in 1562.

We were told there was a big fire in the village when most houses were burned down and destroyed probably because all the roofs were thatched. Only some belongings were saved. There was no water in the village and it was a small distance to the Cloth Mill nearest the river for the water. This Mill and another nearby, together with the farms provided the local employment. Where the main Wool Mill stood next to the river now is a huge Dairy Factory and employs people from miles around. A History of Lullington and Orchard Lees is being written by a Michael Mc Garvie, 19 Styles Hill, Frome, Somerset, and hopes it will be produced in the next year or so.

11/9/1998...We visited the Church at Broughton Gifford, Nr. Melksham. This is a very imposing building on a hill in the lower end of the village. It was locked. The Churchyard was very well kept and there are dozens of old gravestones none of which could we find a 'Fry'. The churchyard is in two halves, separated by the road which despite being a country lane, is extremely busy. The detached part of the yard is all 'Modern Graves' and still in use. A Plack inside the porchway commemorates the 1914/18 war and a 'Fry' of the 14th Hussars amongst those of the village who died. We had very limited time here and took several photo's. The Church warden is Mr. David Chandler, Jasmine Cottage, Broughton Gifford. Phone 782241: The Revd. Ron Hart, The Rectory, Holt, Phone 782289.

25/11/1998...reply from Michael McGarvie....Wonderful Information !! He writes thus..."I've come across the Fry's certainly. I expect you know that Robert Fry went Bankrupt in 1809. I believe there was a notice in the Salisbury & Winchester Journal. I think the Original Fry's came from Bristol, not then having the Mill but a property called 'James's Batch', later merely The Batch. Robert Fry & Thomas Jones, of Bristol, Wool-Staplers, Clothiers & Woollen Drapers, took the premises in 1779, a close of meadow lately converted into an Orchard with a tenement thereon erected" .

... "In 1783, Fry & Jones assigned the premises to Zephania Fry, of Bristol, Clothier. Fry conveyed to William Pryor in 1785" ..

... "In 1808, Francis Pryor, Spinster of Lullington conveyed James's Batch to Robert Fry of Road, Somerset, Spinner Fry took out a Mortgage of £800 with a Frome Banker John Douglas Middleton [a descendant lives in Road]. The premises now included a factory and workshop, lately erected" "Fry. also appears to have become Undertenant to a Mr Grant at Lullington Mill and no doubt overstretched himself ..Fry appears in the Mortgages until 1814. When he went bankrupt, the workshops at James's Batch were unfinished and his machinery was offered for sale together with the unexpired lease of the Mill".

He sends 1818 map of Lullington which shows 'James's Batch' [97a] and this appears to be next door to the 'Mill House Garden' Jackie & I were shown by Alan Hogarth. He also sent the 'For Auction' poster for Lullington Mill in 1855.

22/2/1999...wrote to Sam Coombs. She advertised in 'SDFHS Greenwood Tree' wanting info re 'Rode'.

24/2/1999...Sam Coombs replies with photo of page 183 of a book by Kenneth Rogers "Wiltshire & Somerset Woolen Mills, published by Pasold Research Fund 1976 ref ISBN 0 903859 068 [about £8.50]

It says " Lullington Mill. This Mill was among those to which inspectors of medley broad cloth were appointed in 1727. No more is known of it till 1803, when it was the property of John Renison, a Bradford Clothier, and R.E. Willmot and was offered to let. It was described as a factory with two floors 59ft x 20 ft, with two fulling stocks and capable of driving eight or twelve engines , and had been built four years previously."

"The new lessee was James Grant, fuller, at a rent of £130. Grant must have underlet to a clothier named ROBERT FRY, who was bankrupt in1809. His machinery was offered for sale with the un-expired lease of the mill with workshops over and a small factory adjoining. He also owned a house in the village of Lullington in the garden of which he had erected a building intended for factory, but then unfinished."

"Grant appears to have occupied the mill for some years; later occupiers included John Cuzner c1820, James Stancomb and John Morgan who insured the water - driven scribbling mill in 1825, Richard Scammell c.1830, and James Moore, 1844. In 1838 it was driven by wheels of 10 h.p and 7h.p and employed thirty hands. But it was only called a fulling mill in the Occupation of Thomas Marks, when in 1835 an undivided share in it amounting to three-fourths, half of the remaining fourth, and one third of one eighth of ther same remaining fourth, was offered for sale. Readers will readily see that the amount 85/96 of the whole. Later in the nineteenth century it was a sawmill. The mill has been reduced to a single-storey building, of five bays with a two-bay later extension, perhaps the small factory of c. 1799. It is of stone rubble with stone windows of standard design. The wheel of breast shot. There are no remains of the building in Lullington, which stood a short distance south of the church. "

2000...16 March...John, Jackie & I visit Peter Weeks at Lullington and he takes us to see ' James's Batch' which is now 2 Cottages called 'Batch Cottages'. The House, which has since been divided into two cottages is very large and the garden drops steeply down to the river and flood plain area. There was no sign of the workshops but over the years the stone and rubble used to build same would have been used for something else. Peter Weeks also showed us his saw mill building belonging to Mill House which he owns. He said we should ask at Longleate about previous buildings and layouts as they may well have details in their Archives. He had also spoken to Michael Mc Garvie who also advised same.

2000...17 March...At Trowbridge Records Centre we can find no enties of further children on the 'Rode' Fishe , Referance M 2393/1. This was barely readable. However we should look at it again as we were pushed for time.

2003...23 september...From her sister Katharine's Book " Katharine Fry's Book, it says on page 85...The year 1821 was marked by the Marriage of my Sister Rachel to Francis Cresswell, Captain of the Honourable East India Company's Ship 'Astell'. In may 1821 the yearly meeting was at it's height, and friends swarmed to St. Mildred's Court, when the 'Astell' sailed back into the river and Captain Cresswell made Rachel an offer in form, and was accepted with the assent of our Parents. Consent they could not give. Discipline in the Society of Friends that members were liable to disownment if they permitted their children, being minors, to marry a person who was not of the same religion with themselves. A plan was arranged for Rachel to be committed to the care of Aunt Richenda, the wife of Reverend Francis Cunningham of the Church of England, who married Rachel to Captain Cresswell on the 23rd August 1821 at Runcton, the Fry's not being present. This caused considerable concern to all....

Chapter 13...page 93...In the Autumn of 1822 they had the pleasure of receiving Sister Rachel and her husband before they settled in Dartmouth Ror, Blackheath. henceforth, Francis Cresswell became a much-beloved member of our family.

2003...28 March...On a visit to the Frenchay Museum, Bristol today, Alan Freke told us that those who were buried at 'Quaker Friars in the centre of Bristol' were Reinterred.

This was because that burial ground was turned into a car park and some building work done. He found out that the remains were Reinterred in 1956 to the Avonview Cemetery, Blackworth Road, St. George, Bristol. He took us there and we took photos and a video of the New Headstone. Many of our Ancestors were buried at Quaker Friars over the years and this note is being applied to their files so that we know where any remains now rest.

JOSEPH-STORRS FRY [The Second] Born 6th August 1826. Died 7th July 1913

Cocoa manufacturer and Quaker Philanthropist, he was born in Union Street, Bristol, the eldest son of Joseph Fry, of Bristol, by his wife Mary Ann, daughter of Edward Swaine, of Henley-on Thames. A younger brother was the distinguished jurist Sir Edward Fry.

He was educated chiefly at home, but was at Bristol College for a short time. After learning business methods in an accountant's office, he entered the business of cocoa and chocolate manufacture, established in Bristol in the middle of the eighteenth century by his Great-Grandfather, Joseph Fry. In 1855 he became a partner in the firm.

Fry's interest in local affairs of a religious and social character was deep and constant. For many years he conducted a brief service with the employees of the cocoa works, and in his will he left £42,000 to be distributed among them.

In 1871 he joined the young Men's Christian Association in Bristol, and he became president in 1877. In 1877 he was elected a member of the committee of the Bristol General Hospital, becoming later chairman, treasurer, and president. Up to the last few years of his life he visited the hospital every Christmas Eve and spoke to each patient at his bedside. In 1909 he became an honary freeman of the city, and in 1912 the University of Bristol conferred on him the honary degree of LL.D.

Fry was born a member of the Society of Friends and throughout his life gave ungrudging attention to its interests. He rose to the highest position in this religious body, being 'clerk' [or President] of the 'London Yearly Meeting' for fifteen years [1870-1875, 1881-1889], the longest period for which that office has been held by any individual since 1704.

He was a preacher among the Friends and a pioneer in many organizations connected with their Sunday schools and home and foreign missions.

Fry's private life was singularly uneventful. The room which he occupied on the business premises to the end of his life was, he believed, the room in which he had been born. He lived with his mother for sixty years and never married.

The things which usually interest men in his position-travel, politics, art, science, intercourse with nature- had no attraction for him. The distribution of his charities occupied no inconsiderable portion of his time and thought. He died 7 July 1913. The funeral was a remarkable demonstration of the esteem in which he was held by his fellow-citizens.

2001...February...Snippets from the Book 'Margery Fry' by Enid Huws Jones.....

...'In the autumn of 1913 she became, [Sara Margery Fry] , through the will of her bachelor uncle, Joseph Storrs Fry, financially independent for the rest of her life. He is said to have died in the room where he was born, in the old house in front of the original cocoa factory'.

...'Yet Uncle Joseph had a memorable funeral: the factory choir sang at the graveside, and at the same time as Friends were holding ' a meeting for worship on the occasion of the death of our Friend', a memorial service took place in Bristol Cathedral'.

...'Though Uncle Joseph's interests had seemed strangely limited to his niece, his will was a masterpiece. Night after night he must have sat in his lonely room, parcelling out his huge wealth as if for a great christmas treat. First came gifts to his workers and the great benefactions to Quakers and other causes. Then came the legacies, as one after another this apparently lonely old man remembered those who had shown kindness or need. he had made one miscalculation: He was nearly twice as rich as he had believed himself to be.

When the residue of the estate was divided Margery Fry found herself with a larger income than a university professor: just ten times as large, by Margery's friend Dr. Fisher reckoning in 1917, as the pay of 42,200 certificated elementary school teachers, men and women.

2001...25 May...from the book 'Sir Edward Fry'...it says, page 37...The eldest [Joseph Storrs] , combined the characters of a successful man of business and a leading member of the Society of Friends....As a young man he was introduced to the Family Business of cocoa and chocolate...when he joined it as a partner in 1855 it was a small affair...At the time of his death it gave employment to over 5000 people'.

2001...20 June ...at Bristol Records Office we found the book "Memoir of Francis Fry" by Theodore Fry, where it mentions Joseph Storrs Fry, the second.

....."Within the Society he rose to occupy the highest position: for fifteen years [1870-89] he was Clerk of the London Yearly Meeting- the longest period during which that office has been held by any individual for almost two centuries".

2001...June 21st...the following is taken from a 'Biography 'of "Marian Fry Pease" dated 1945, Page 25 , which we found at Bristol Records Office among the files of J.S. Fry & Sons of Bristol, Accession No. AN 27041018 / M0003610 AN / B20853...

THE CHILDREN OF JOSEPH AND MARY ANN FRY

Joseph Storrs Fry - born 1826, died 1913.

Generation 11 (con't)

Of middle height - with rather curling dark hair which early became quite white, grey eyes - clean shaven - with a delicate rather retrousee nose - a refined mouth - a frequent smile - rather bland and benevolent than humorous. Slight as a young man, inclined to be stout as he grew old. Always dressed in the black broad cloth, orthodox Friend's collarless swallow tail coat - a high shirt collar and black tie. He wore Wellington boots under his trousers. His large, rather wide brimmed top hat was always a little on the back of his head. He had beautiful, very wide hands, with the blue veins showing through the skin; a courteous, rather detached manner - a clear sonorous voice - a pleasant chuckling laugh.

He was a very small eater, not a teetotaller till, I think, middle life; he was sadly unpunctual for the 2.30 or 3 o'clock dinner at Charlotte Street. He was not a man of very deep or passionate feeling. He was never married and it was believed that he was never in love. His strongest affection was probably given to his mother with whom he lived in intimate relation till her death at 89. I remember how at a family gathering on the evening after her funeral, he, a man of 60, suddenly broke down in tears.

He was extraordinarily conservative in his habits. He left school when he was 16 or 17 and at once entered the family business; from that day till he was well past 80, year in year out he went down to the office in Union Street, leaving the house about 8.30 in order to conduct the religious service with the work people with which his business day always began. The business was not very flourishing when he entered it - it employed about 56 people. He left it one of the largest concerns in the city with over 3,000 workers. When he was a school boy his masters used to say that there was nothing to choose between his intellectual gifts and those of his brother Edward. He devoted these gifts to the business and to the service of the Society of Friends.

He was a leading minister, frequently preaching in Meeting and, for something like 20 years, Clerk to Yearly Meeting, the most important post in that democratic Society, and all his life he diligently attended to the affairs of the Society in Bristol. He was also Chairman to the General Hospital, to which he gave very generously both time and money; the joint donor with one of the Wills family of the great convalescent home on Dendham Down. He gave largely to the University and the Blind Asylum and took a leading part in a great deal of the religious and philanthropical life in the city. In later life he seldom took holidays. He would sometimes join a family party at the sea-side for a few days, and once or twice went abroad with one or other of his brothers, and went once to America. He read the "Times" daily after dinner - before he went back to Union Street. His other reading was I think mainly religious and biblical - but he must have read much as a young man - he knew his Johnson and Boswell, his Coleridge and Wordsworth well. I remember a speech when he gave the prizes to the Grammar School Boys when he was an old man, full of quotations from Virgil and of literary suggestion.

The business under him was run on the old-fashioned paternal or rather perhaps personal lines, for he had a great objection to interfering with what he considered the private affairs of the workers. He saw every applicant for work himself and I have little doubt gave every boy and girl good advice about their conduct and so on. All the work people [in the days before sick insurance] had a regular allowance in case of illness, and he visited them in their homes or at the Hospital himself. A large and comfortable dining room was provided with arrangements for warming up food, and the Bible reading and hymn singing brought him face to face with the whole factory daily.

There were no welfare workers in those days and he must have been kept very fully informed by the foremen and forewomen. There are plenty of people in Bristol still eager to tell of the personal ties which used to hold the concern together- and inclined to lament the very different and much more advanced methods of the present.

His personal habits were exceedingly simple. He did not keep a carriage till after his mother's death - when her carriage and pair was exchanged for a single horse brougham. He had to leave Charlotte street about 1890, the landlord having sold the house for a hostel and he moved into lodgings in Upper Belgrave Road - warehousing his furniture. The brougham remained in the stables close to Charlotte Street, and after 27 years, Henry, our Grandmother's old coachman, daily drove the couple of miles to Belgrave Road to take him to business.

He, the richest man at the time in Bristol, lived contentedly in these lodgings for a number of years, and finally bought the house, installing the lodging house keeper and his wife as his servants, and replacing part of their furniture by his own.

This simplicity was not in any way connected with miserliness. He had so few wants that it sometimes seemed as if he could not easily imagine how many more most of us have - but I remember a delightful £5 tip when I was a girl, and an offer of a brougham and horse to my mother when he thought she had not a sufficiently comfortable carriage. For many years he gave her and some other relative's £100 a year, thinking they had not as much to give away as they wished, and I have an impression that he once gave her a much larger sum for distribution in charity as she chose.

He gave largely and unostentatiously to public objects and his Will was extraordinarily interesting. He left small legacies to an enormous number of people in humble circumstances in Bristol whom he must have known in connection with his religious and social work, and legacies - all carefully considered - to every one employed in whatever capacity in the works. I should not think any Will ever gave such extended pleasure and satisfaction.. It was like him also to make his 37 nephews and nieces, and not their parents, his residuary legatees.

His Christmas cheques were an amusing illustration of his kindly conservation. Our grandmother in the later years of her life, substituted for her Christmas present to her 37 grandchildren, tips ranging from a sovereign to a shilling according to our ages. At her death e.g. our family tip amounted to £6.5.0d., and the other families had, of course, other sums. For 27 years every Christmas Eve, each family received a cheque for exactly those sums "in memory of my dear Mother" and accompanied by a noble box of chocolates.

During the last few years of his life, Uncle Joseph gradually lost his sight. He bore this trial with great serenity. He died of old age at 86.

2003...28 March...On a visit to the Frenchay Museum, Bristol today, Alan Freke told us that those who were buried at 'Quaker Friars in the centre of Bristol' were Reinterred.

FRANCIS FRY,

Born 28th October 1803 - Died 12th November 1886

SECOND SON OF JOSEPH STORRS FRY [1769-1835]

Bibliographer, born at Westbury-on-Trym, Nr. Bristol on the 28th October 1893. He was educated at a large school at Fishponds, in the neighborhood of Frenchay, kept by a Quaker named Joel Lean, and commenced his business training at Croydon.

From his twentieth year to middle age he devoted himself to the rapidly increasing business of the firm of J.S. Fry & Sons, cocoa and chocolate manufacturers, at Bristol, in which he was afterwards a Partner.

In 1833 he married Matilda, only daughter of Daniel and Anne Penrose, of 'Brittas, Co. Wicklow.' He took part in the introduction of Railways in the West of England, and was a member of the Board of the Bristol and Gloucester Railway, which held its first sitting 11th July 1839, retaining his position during the various amalgamations of the line until its union with The Midland Railway.

He was also a Director of the Bristol and Exeter, The South Devon, and other Railways. He took a principal share in managing The Bristol Waterworks [1846] until his death. In 1839 he removed to Cotham, between Bristol and Redland, built a house close to the Old Tower, re-presented in many of the books which he afterwards purchased.

With William Forster, Father of W.E. Forster and Robert Alsop he visited Northern Italy in 1850, as a deputation from The Society of Friends to various Crowned Heads, praying for their countenance in the abolition of Slavery [B. Seebohm, Memoirs of William Forster, 1865, ii 284].

In 1852 he made proposals to the railway companies for a general parcel despatch throughout the United Kingdom. He catalogued The Library of the Friends Monthly Meeting at Bristol in 1860, and visited Germany. A discovery in Munich about the books printed at Worms by Peter Schoeffer the younger enabled him to decide that Tyndale's first English New Testament came from Schoeffer's press. Two years later Fry produced his careful facsimile reprint, by means of tracing and Lithography, of Tyndale's New Testament [1525 or 1526], the first complete edition printed in English, from the only perfect copy known, now in The Baptist College, Bristol.

In the same year he edited a facsimile reprint of the pamphlet known as the 'Soldier's Pocket Bible,' distributed to Cromwell's army, and discovered by G. Livermore of Boston, who had himself reprinted it the previous year.

Several editions were circulated among the soldiers during the American Civil War. It was somewhat altered and enlarged as the 'Christian Soldiers Penny Bible', [1693], also facsimiled and edited by Fry. In 1863 he issued a couple of small rare pieces illustrative of Tyndale's version and in 1865 published his remarkable treatise on the Great Bible of 1539, the six editions of Cranmer's Bible of 1540 and 1541, and the five editions of the authorised version.

Fry visited many private and public libraries to collate different copies of these Bibles, and was able to settle the peculiarities of the various issues. This work was followed by his account of Coverdale's translation of the Scriptures, and his description of forty editions of Tyndale's version, most of which vary among themselves. Laborious accuracy, great bibliographical acumen, and a profound acquaintance with the history of the English Bible mark these three books.

He was a member of the committee of the Bristol Philosophical Society, as well as of the Bristol Museum and Library. Books and China formed his chief study. His Collection of specimens produced at the Bristol factory between 1768 and 1781 was particularly complete. Many examples are described by Hugh Owen [Two Centuries of Ceramic Art in Bristol, 1873, pp78-9, 97, 243, &c.] His collection of bibles and testament numbered nearly thirteen hundred, chiefly english, especially editions of the version of Tyndale, Coverdale, and Cranmer, but with a number of first editions in other languages.

He took an active interest in many associations for social improvement. He died 12th November 1886, soon after the completion of his eighty-third year, and was buried in The Friends Graveyard at Kings Weston, near Bristol.

His writings are 1. '[A catalogue of books in the library belonging to The Friends Monthly Meeting in Bristol', 3rd edit. Bristol, 1860.

2. ' The First New Testament printed in the English Language [1525 or 1526], translated from the Greek by William Tyndale, reproduced in facsimile, with introduction,] Bristol 1862.

3. ' The Soldiers Pocket Bible, printed at London by G.B. and R.W. for G.C. 1643, reproduced in facsimile, with an introduction, 'London, 1862, [this consists of text's of Scripture, chiefly from the Geneva version, with special applications].

4. 'The Christian Soldiers Penny Bible, London, Printed by R. Smith for Sam Wade, 1693, reproduced in facsimile with an introductory Note,' London 1862, [No 3 version altered, with the texts correctly quoted]'.

5. ' A proper Dyalogue between a gentillman and a husbandman eche complaynyng to other miserable calamite through the ambicion of clergye with a compendious olde treatyse shewynge Howe that we ought to have the Scripture in Englysshe, Hans Lft, 1530, reproduced in facsimile, with an Introduction,' London, 1863.

6. ' The Prophete Jonas, with an introduction by William Tyndale, reproduced in facsmile, to which is added Coverdale's version of Jonah, with an introduction,' London, 1863,

And numerous others.

*2001...20 June...We found a copy of the book "Quakers in Commerce" in Bristol Records Office when on a visit, and in it was " Memoir of Francis Fry of Bristol by his son Theodore Fry. M.P. as follows: Page 194, "... In the next generation , too, that of the great-grandsons of Dr. Joseph Fry, members of the family made their mark in various fields. Francis Fry, the collector of books and director of railway companies [and brother to Edward and Lewes], had three notable sons-Francis James, of J.S. Fry & Sons; Theodore; and John Doyle Fry, the printer and stationer.

John Doyle Fry's brother -in -law, Robert Barclay, [1] a lineal descendant of Robert Barclay the Apologist and himself an authority on the early history of the Society, had in 1855 bought a stationer's business dating back to 1799. When the two relatives joined in 1867, under the title of the new partnership two great Quaker names were coupled together- Barclay & Fry. Robert Barclay was responsible for three important inventions: he designed the two-revolution printing press; he solved the problem of how to make the paper used for cheques chemically protected [the cheque books of a very great number of banks in this country are printed by Barclay & Fry]; and thirdly he devised the process of printing on tin, from which has developed an extensive business in decorated tin boxes. On Robert Barclay's' death in 1876 John Doyle Fry bought out the Barclay interest and twenty years later had the Grove Works built in Southwark which are still the headquarters of the firm. John Fry, son of John Doyle Fry, the last chairman who was a member of the Fry family, retired in 1936 and Barclay & Fry, Ltd. Is continued as a branch of the Metal Box Co.,Ltd., [1] but is engaged in all the same processes as when under the old management.

2001...20 June...According to the Notes of John P. Fry about The Pedigree of the Family of Fry, he writes that " Mr Francis Fry, FSA [1803-1886] had in his possession a pedigree of his family compiled by the late Mr. Edmund Hogg Fry, containing the following note, " John Fry of Sutton Benger [1701-1775], had a parchment in his possession with these coat of arms emblazoned and signed by the Clarencieux King of Arms, which he affirmed had been in his family some generations. This came into the posession of Mr. William Fry, the Banker [his son], who sent it to China to have a dinner set painted from whence it never returned". "The practice of ordering such services from China was fashionable at the time and many are in The British Museum". We have a copy of these notes to hand, taken from Bristol Records Office , ref 38538/12/1

24/2/1998...Have found a Marriage of MARY ANN DYER FRY to a Cornelius Bird in the Registers. Because of the Christain Name 'Dyer' , we have ordered the certificate, providing the Father is 'Thomas Dyer'{ see 1854]

3/3/1998...Statistics Office at Southport did Not send certificate because father is NOT 'Thomas'.' Who is it then???

5/3/1998...Phoned Office at SOUTHPORT. Do the certificate anyway so that we can see who it is. Cost £12.00.[Re Mary Ann Dyer Fry]

1998...15 March...Somerset Archives reply...They have found a ROBERT AND MARY FRY . Five of their children were baptised at Lullington,[Nr Rode] on 3/9/1809...William, John, Robert, JOSEPH and Edith Maria. Another child of theirs was baptised Samual Nicholas 16/12/1810. An unnamed child of Robert Fry from Lullington was buried 25/9/1808 age 2 at Rode Particular Baptist Church. They found no Baptism of Thomas Dyer Fry. Robert and Mary Fry were not Married at Rode or Lullington and were not married by licence according to their Index. There are no Fry entries in the Rode baptismal Register between 1804 to 1807. There was only one Fry marriage there between 1754 to 1812. Elizabeth Fry married Phoenix Watts 2/9/1755 [58 years].

1998...16 March...Receive Marriage Certificate for a MARY ANN DYER FRY from Southport. The Father is 'Joseph Fry'....Who is this????and who is Mary???File it.

3/4/1998...AT FRC...found 34, Lever St, St Luke, with "Rowlands Family" living there.

1998...3 April...At FRC...Found the 1841 Census for 140, High Street, Hoxton Old Town at Last... Ref. HO 107/708 3 Page 5. The houses in the street were not numbered on the census. Bonus is that 'Mary Fry age 70' is living there. This must be Thomas 1 Dyers Mother. No places of birth are shown. Also there is 'Henrietta Rowlands age 20 a dress maker..Is this William B Rowlands Sister ??

1998...16 April...At FRC...Found the Marriage of Thomas and Sarah on the IGI and Marriage Books again Ref 1 October 1845 Stepney, St. Dunstan Vol 2 509. Have Ordered Certificate. Hopefully this will show both Parents and places of Birth. 1861 census for 9, Dorchester Place, Ref RG9/242 Folio 42, shows the 'House as Empty' . Where did they live???...Also on the IGI Mary Dyer's [many of] , Wiltshire page 4656...no sign or marriage to Robert. Also checked Somerset. Also got copy of Wilts map for 1849. It also Mentions that 'Rwode' was called 'Rode'in The Domesday Book'.

LOOK at the details from Somerset Records Office....The Father is ROBERT, the Mother is ? Mary' and one of their children is 'Joseph'. Is this 'Joseph' the Father of MARY ANN DYER FRY ??? If Thomas's Father turns out to be 'Robert' on his marriage certificate then the Family at 'Lullington' MUST be the one we are looking for.

23/4/1998...Marriage Certificate Received. Shows that Thomas's Father is ROBERT FRY . We must now have Thomas's Family. 'Mary' age 70 in 1841 has to be his Mother.

1998...15 June...at FRC... Found the Christening of Samual Thomas of Thomas Dyey / Sarah Fry on the 30/12/1827 at Shoreditch, St. Leonards on Page 56520 of IGI London 1992 edition. This can only be of our Thomas and Sarah, and have made it their first child.

or Bath March 1843 Vol 11 Page 15 ?

or Alderbury June 1842 Vol 8 Page 175 ?

2003...28 March...On a visit to the Frenchay Museum, Bristol today, Alan Freke told us that those who were buried at 'Quaker Friars in the centre of Bristol' were Reinterred. This was because that burial ground was turned into a car park and some building work done. He found out that the remains were Reinterred in 1965 to the Avonview Cemetery, Blackworth Road, St. George, Bristol. He took us there and we took photos and a video of the New Headstone. Many of our Ancestors were buried at Quaker Friars over the years and this note is being applied to their files so that we know where any remains now rest.

Australia, sends us a '5 Generation list' and also sends us Part of a " Booklet Commemorating The Centenery of the Fry Family in Western Australia, in 1994 ". In it it says on Page 1... "As Henry grew older, he followed Fry family tradition and bacame a member of the Army Reserve.

He was a Captain in the 1st Essex Rifle Volunteers of the Hornchurch Company when he married Edith Horatia Partridge in 1875. Edith Partridge and Henry Partridge Fry were distantly related as they shared the same ancestor Henry Patridge (1711 - 1793.).....After their marriage Edith and Henry lived in Shenfield located on the outskirts of Brentwood in Essex and they had three children during the next six years.

In 1881 Henry became ill. It was Christmas time and the family were attending a social function at the nearby Shenfield School. Henry began to feel unwell during the evening and had to be taken home. He was complaining of acute pain which was at first thought to be the result of having taken a chill and nothing serious. The next day he was still unwell and was seen by the local family doctor Dr.Quennell and also by Dr. Ramskill of the London Hospital; Unfortunately nothing could be done and he succumbed to inflammation of the pericarditis and died the day before his 41st birthday on December, 7 1881.

Edith was pregnant at the time of Henry's death. Their son Henry Phillip was born on May 28, 1882 and Edith named him Henry Philip Fry and he became known as ' Phil'.

Generation 12 (con't)

Rt. Hon. Sir Edward Fry, G.C.B., P.C., B.A., D.C.L., LL.d., F.R.S., F.C.A., F.L.S.,
Kt. Lord Justice of the Court of Appeal

Born 4th November 1827. Died 18th October 1918.

Judge, was born in Union Street, Bristol. He was the second son of Joseph Fry, a member of a Wessex Family long established at Corston, near Malmesbury, who followed George Fox and was imprisoned as a recalcitrant Quaker in 1684. Edward Fry's paternal Great Grandfather, Joseph Fry, abandoned medicine for business; the latter's son Edmund Fry, who also abandoned medicine for trade, was the most learned Type Founder of his day. Joseph Fry, the Father of Edward, was an omnivorous reader with strong free-trade, liberal, religious, and philanthropic interests; his wife, Mary Ann, daughter of Edward Swaine, of Henley-on-Thames, traveller for a firm of druggists, was an able, self-confident, buoyant woman, with very strong Quaker convictions, very decisive judgements in practical matters, and a love of poetry. Edwards father and his Quaker friends instilled in the boy an intense love of observation, and a lifelong interest in scenery, animals and more especially plants-
'which I hope , prevented my growing into a mere lawyer'.

His earliest recollections were of the Bristol riots of 1831. His home education included Latin, French, and German.

The study of Greek was postponed, against his wish, till he had to prepare for Bristol college in 1841.

There he and his elder Brother, Joseph Storrs Fry, were ridiculed at first for their Quaker dress and language. Edward at once made his mark and gained a medal for English verse. The college, however, was closed and Dr. James Booth, the Headmaster, opened a private school. Edward records that at the age of fourteen he greedily devoured Berkeley's New Theory of Vision, with a permanent effect on his outlook on matter. With Walter Bagehot, who was at the same school, he formed a fruitful and stimulating friendship.

At the end of 1842 schooldays were over, and from 1843 till he went to London in October 1848 Fry was in business and acquired a practical knowledge of accountancy and shipbroking. He did not take to a mercantile life, but he found time to read widely in classics, literature, and history, and actually wrote at the age of nineteen A Treatise of the Elective Monarchies of Europe [1846]. In the spring of the same year he sent to the Zoological Society of London a paper on The Osteology of the Hylobates agilis, based on a remarkable specimen which had lived in the Clifton Zoological Gardens. This paper and another on The relations of the Edentata to the Reptiles, especially of the Armadillos to the Tortoises, were published by the society. He worked very hard at zoology, and in 1849 in the London matriculation examination secured the prize for that subject, beating [Sir] William Henry Flower who was to become the head of the Natural History Museum at South Kensington. But he was also interested in the study of the osteology of the skull, having seen fossil bones at Weston-super-Mare as early as 1838, and he worked with William Budd, who encouraged his surgical enthusiasms. Fry also found time for thought on the subjects of free trade and education, and as the result of a continental tour in 1848 contributed an article on Germany in 1848 to the London University Magazine.

After this visit Fry decided to go to the bar, and with this in view he entered University College, London, where Thomas Hodgkin and Walter Bagehot were fellow students. After making a brilliant mark at the college, he took his B.A. degree in 1851. He entered the chambers first of Bevan Braithwait, the conveyancer, then of Edward Bullen, the eminent special pleader in the Temple, and draughtsman, and was called to the bar at Lincolns Inn in 1854.

The beginning was not auspicious. He was called at a moment when family financial affairs had been given temporary anxiety, and for a long period briefs failed to flow in. But he was working all the while, and soon after the publication [1858] of his well known book , A Treatise on the specific Performance of Contracts, the tide began to turn. Fry, in the time of probation, also produced a volume, Essays on the Accordance of Christianity with the Nature of Man [1857], which secured the approval of Baron von Bunsen, who expresses surprise that there was any one in England who would write such a book.

The early years in London from 1848 to 1859 were haunted by fear of Failure. Fry's tastes were austere and his judgement too well balanced for him to entertain what seemed like false hopes. But sadness and fear of failure ended when he married in the Friends Meeting House at Lewes in 1859, Mariabella, daughter of the Quaker barrister, John Hodgkin. It was about this time that Fry discarded the external peculiarities of Quakerism as not being really connected with religious life. In 1859 he issued a pamphlet on this subject.

From 1859 until he was raised to the bench in 1877 Fry acquired a steadily growing practice, not only in Chancery and company work but at the Parliamentary bar. He took silk in 1869 and joined the court of Vice-Chancellor James, competing with [Sir] Richard Paul Amphlett and [Sir] Edward Ebenezer Kay, who like himself, were later to sit in the Court of Appeal. He quickly made his mark by a convincing argument in a company case in which he opposed by Lord Westbury, Sir Roundell Palmer, and others.

He succeeded and was warmly congratulated by his opponents. When James became a Lord Justice, Fry practised for a time before Vice-Chancellor Bacon, but eventually migrated to the Rolls court, presided over by Lord Romilly and, after 1873, by Sir George Jessel. But pressure of work in the House of Lords made it necessary for him soon to 'go special'. This did not long have the desired effect, and his work was greatly on the increase when, in April 1877, he was offered by Lord Cairns, the additional judgeship in the chancery division authorized that year by statute.

He accepted the offer with considerable misgiving, and characteristically set to work to put in writing his conceptions of his new duties. His precepts are worthy of study by all judges.

Fry was the first Judge appointed after the Judicature Act had merged the High Court of Chancery in the High Court, the first Chancery Judge to bear the Title of Mr. Justice and to go circuit. His Knighthood followed in the usual form. He at first dreaded the circuit work, but came to like it, and impressed the bar with his judicial versatility.

Probably Fry's principal legal achievement took place before he passed in 1883, on the death of Sir George Jessel, to the Court of Appeal. The Judicature Act's of 1873 and 1875, in addition to the reorganisation of the courts, had provided a body of rules to regulate practice in the separate divisions of the new High Court. After some years these rules needed revision as a result of experience, and it was necessary to provide a comparatively inexpensive machinery enabling trustees, executors, and beneficiaries to secure necessary judicial aid without the ruinous costs of an administration suit, often enough undertaken for the sake of the costs.

Fry was on the Rule Committee of the Judges, and with respect to this particular evil he regarded his work as one of the best actions of his life. In fact 'he invented the procedure by originating summons which affected a beneficial revolution'.

Lord Cozens-Hardy also says that the gradual development of the new system of practice which replaced the old practice of the High Court of Chancery might almost be called the invention of Fry. From 1883 to whitsontide 1892 Fry sat in The Court of Appeal with, among others, Lord Esher, Lords Justices Baggallay, Cotton, Lindley, and Bowen. Lord Esher tried Fry's patience and temper sometimes, but on the whole these two very different men got on well enough, while relations between Fry and Lindley and Bowen were the happiest possible. Sir Alfred Hopkinson [Memoir of Sir Edward Fry, p 81] says that Lindley, Bowen, and Fry together 'contributed invaluable work in the development of English case law when there was a special need for men who possessed such qualities as his [Fry's] for dealing with the new conditions then arising'.

The same writer says of Fry, 'no better example of this power to master fully the most complicated facts, to state the relevant matter clearly, to draw from a long series of precedents the true principles to guide a decision and to apply them fearlessly, can be given than the judgment delivered by him and adopted as the judgement of the whole Court of Appeal in the Banstead Common Case' [Robertson v. Hartropp, 1889].

Generation 12 (con't)

Sir Edward Fry decided to retire in 1892 on the completion of his fifteenth year on the bench. Actually there was a quarter of a century of active life before him and he was at this height of his judicial powers. He was somewhat weary of the noise and turmoil of the courts and longed to live permanently in the country with more leisure for reading and travel.

The Fry's left London for their country home at Failand, near Clifton. There the ex-judge sat in the local court of petty sessions and the aldermanship of the Somerset County Council. He was eighty-six when he retired from this work. From time to time he also sat on the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Various estimates exist of the judicial capacity of Sir Edward Fry. Probably the final estimate will be that he was a great Judge, though his abilities were never tested by a seat in the House of Lords. Infinitely painstaking and versatile to an unusual degree, with a very large range of knowledge, he combined a passion for seeking out first principals and for doing justice, with a fixed determination not to move out of the ambit of the case as limited by the facts before him. His strictly logical mind in these circumstances tended not only to limit the application of a judgment, but to rely on a somewhat technical view of the facts and of the law.

He was working in a difficult period of transition from the old practice to the new, and his type of mind was of particular value in the period 1877 to 1892. In The House of Lords he might have given freer scope to his passion for first principals than was possible in the new Supreme Court. When he was free of highly technical civil procedure he was, whether in cases at quarter sessions or in his writing on legal themes, capable of the longest outlook.

Probably, when the history of English Law for the period falls into perspective, it will be found that Fry did more than any other lawyer, with perhaps the exception of Lord Cairns, to secure perfect continuity in the adaptation, under purified conditions of civil procedure, of the rules of law to modern social conditions.

Fry's later life was one of singular and beneficent activity. He took more than four years of leisure and travel, and then, when on the verge of seventy years, he plunged once more into the turmoil of work. He accepted in 1897 the offer to preside over the royal commission on the Irish Land Acts, an office which he filled with such capacity, knowledge, and tact that his services were at once widely called upon. In 1898 he acted as consiliator, under the Consiliation Act of 1896, in the colliery strike of South Wales and Monmouth, and although the conciliation failed, his report led to the termination of the strike; the men had full confidence in him.

In 1901 he acted as arbitrator in the Grimsby Fishery dispute; In 1902 he sat as president on the court of arbitration connected with the water companies of London. His remuneration for this heavy work was £5.000, of which he returned over £3.000 as he declined to receive more than would have made up his salary if he had been sitting as a Lord Justice.

In 1906 and 1907 he acted as arbitrator between the London and North Western Railway Company and its men, and issued an award [February 1909] that worked smoothly and well for a time. He declined any fee for 'the most tiresome piece of business which I have ever transacted'.

In the meantime Fry was brought into touch with international affairs in 1902-1903 by acting as arbitrator at the Hague between the United States and Mexico in the pious funds of California dispute, the first case to be brought before the Hague tribunal created by the first Hague conference in 1899. In November 1900 he had been given a place on the list of judges for this court. The five arbitrators, after some difficulties, settled and issued their award.

Fry's next task was to act as the British legal assessor on the commission appointed to deal with the North Sea [Dogger bank] incident in October 1904, when the Russian fleet attacked in a moment of panic, the British herring fleet- an incident that threatened war. Fry's work on the commission- the findings of which upheld the British case- was highly commended. He played an active part at the second Hague Conference of 1907, when he was the doyen of the conference as ambassador extra-ordinary and first plenipotentiary delegate of Great Britain.

Generation 12 (con't)

Fry, although an Octogenarian, made his personality felt; he took a leading part in the debates, and was entrusted by the British Government with the duty of raising the question of the limitation of armaments and of making the offer that Great Britain would exchange information with any other nation on the subject of naval construction.

In the next year he again acted at The Hague as one of the arbitrators in the quarrel between France and Germany over the Casablanca incident. In May 1909 the award was made, and the two nations acted on it and exchanged apologies according to the sentence of the court.

The remaining nine years of Fry's life were occupied with the various pursuits, literary, scientific, and educational, in which he delighted. His interest in the University of London lasted for nearly half a century. He joined the council of University College during the busiest of his years at the bar, and strove hard and successfully to secure a teaching university for London. He did much on the senate of the university to bring into the university all the institutions of high educational character in the metropolis.

The scheme which eventually was adopted was not very different from that for which he had always striven. His efforts were not limited to London. In 1906 he presided over the commission to enquire into the condition of Trinity College, Dublin, and of the Royal University of Ireland with a view to the solution of the problem of university education in Ireland. He dissented from the main report, and the view taken by himself, Sir Arthur W. Rucker, and [Sir] J.G. Butcher that the ancient foundation of Trinity College should be preserved was accepted by Mr. Birrell when he became Chief Secretary in 1907.

Fry, who on two occasions declined the offer of a Peerage, was created G.C.B. in 1907; he was also elected fellow of the Royal Society [1883] and Honorary Fellow of Balliol College, Oxford [1894].

He died 18th October 1918 at Failand. He had nine children, two sons and seven daughters, of whom one died at the age of four. Lady Fry survived him.

Generation 12 (con't)

chapter, which may be of particular interest to you, " Ancestry and Parents".

.....He was Not Lord Chief Justice of England [as advised by the Cadbury' Pedegree of the Family of Fry] but he WAS a Lord Justice of Appeal, ie, a Court of Appeal Judge.

"On the points of detail from their own records [the Library] , I can tell you he was admitted as a student member of Lincoln's Inn at the age of 21, on the 1st November 1849 and was called to the Bar on 9th June 1854. He was elected a Bencher of the Inn on the 25th November 1869 and held the office of Treasurer [the head of the Inn, elected annually] for the year 1892.

Perhaps of more local interest to us, rather than of biographical interest to you, is where he sat as a judge of the Chancery Division of the High Court. His appointment in 1877 was a new one and since at that time the Royal Courts of Justice in the Strand had not yet been built, there was a problem in finding accomodation for his court. Lincoln's Inn agreed to provide it by utilising a lecture room under the newly built extension to the Library.

The court moved out in the 1880's when the Law Courts building was opened, but ever since the room has been known as the "Court Room". For many years thereafter it was a rather dingy accommodation for the Library stacks, but it has recently been splendidly refurbished as a meeting room, called the "Old Court Room".

His eldest son, Edward Portsmouth Fry was also a member of the Inn - admitted at the age of 22 on 12th January 1883 [of new College, Oxford] and called to the bar on the 25th April 1888. But he only appears to have practised as a barrister briefly, since no chambers address is given in the annual Law Lists after the edition of 1892 - possibly because as noted in the Agnes Fry Memoir of their father, he suffered from a "lifelong illness".

We have a portrait of Sir Edward, by his younger son, Roger E. Fry [the well known art writer and artist, member of the Bloomsbury group, also with an entry in DNB, died 1934].

I enclose a photocopy of a black and white photograph of it, and also photocopies of two photographs of him, and of a Spy cartoon from Vanity Fair [with a transcript of the accompanying text].

Apparently there is a portrait of him, by Hall, in the National Portrait Gallery." Guy Holborn, Librarian 2001...19/20 June...Jackie and I visit St. Bartholamews Church, Lower Failand, Somerset and find the Grave of Sir and Lady Fry and theiir Daughters Mariabella and Agnes. We also visit Failand House which today is divided into 3 homes, One of which belongs to Mr & Mrs Mc Gregor who took us round the grounds. These are massive and when Sir Edward had it, it must have amounted to several hundred acres. The Graveyard and House overlook the Severn Estuary, with views for miles. This view even includes the New Severn Bridge.

SARA MARGERIE FRY, 1874-1958

Reformer

8th Child and 6th Daughter of Sir Edward Fry & his wife Mariabella

Sara Margery was born in Highgate and educated at home until she was seventeen; she then spent a year at Miss Lawrence's boarding School [later Roedeen] at Brighton.

In 1892 Sara retired from the Bench and the family moved to Failand in Somerset. Encouraged by her brother, Roger Fry, Sara hoped initially to go to Newnham, but her Quaker parents regarded Cambridge with suspicion as a breeding-ground of agnostics. [So, though she later came to accept an agnostic position, she reached it by another route.] Eventually she succeeded in obtaining permission to sit the entrance examination for Somerville College, Oxford, and went up to read mathematics in 1894, staying until 1897, but taking no examinations.

Somerville friendships, with Eleanor Rathbone and Dorothea Scott among others, remained important through her life. For the next eighteen months she returned to the duties of a daughter at home. The opportunity for an active and independent life came with the unexpected offer of the librarianship at Somerville. There she spent five years from 1899, combining the development and re-housing of the college library with that understanding concern for the young and their problems, which remained one of her outstanding qualities.

Her next post gave her scope to extend this interest in a new setting. Birmingham University had been granted its charter in 1900, and in 1904 she was appointed to the wardenship of a hall of residence for women students in Hagley Road, Edgbaston. Her functions were 'the superintendence of housekeeping and the maintenance of discipline': the latter she interpreted with her customary liberalism, reducing rules to the minimum and allowing students to invite their men friends to dances.

In 1908 the hostel moved into new quarters at University House, for which she had worked hard, and where she used all the resources available to her - pictures, furnishings, music, play-acting, wit and friendship- to create a living community.

On the initiative of Charles Beale, the vice-chancellor, she was made a member of the university council. During this period the range of causes in which she was interested, and of committees on which she served, became increasingly wide- the Staffordshire Education Committee, the County Insurance Committee [set up under the National Insurance Act], the County Sub-committee on Mental Deficiency. Practical experience of the problems of social reform sharpened her tendency towards radicalism. 'Brummagem', she wrote 'is making a first-rate democrat of me.' Shortly before the outbreak of war in 1914 she became financially independent through a legacy from her uncle, Joseph Storrs Fry, and in the summer of 1914 she resigned her post.

Her Quaker background and conscience combined with her experience of social work made it natural that early in the war she should be drawn, with her younger sister Ruth, into work with the Friends' War Victims Relief Committee, first in the Marne and Meuse area, later in the whole of France. From early 1915 until the end of 1917 she remained based on Sermaize, with periodic journeys to other parts of France, dealing with the whole range of problems of those whose lives had been disrupted by the war, from the reconstruction of agriculture to the teaching of embroidery.

Back in England in 1918 Margery Fry was in some uncertainty where her next work should lie, although with a sense of continuing commitment to education in the widest sense. Three events particularly determined the subsequent direction of her life and activities. At the beginning of 1919 she moved to London and set up house at 7, Dalmeny Avenue, overlooking Holloway Prison, with her brother Roger and his children. She thus became more deeply involved in his world, his relationships with artists and writers in particular. In May 1919 she was invited to become a member of the newly established University Grants Committee, on which she continued to serve until 1948, devoting much of her time and energies to visiting universities and gaining first-hand knowledge of their problems.

At the end of 1918 she had been persuaded by Stephen and Rosa Hobhouse to accept the secretaryship of the Penal Reform League which in 1921 amalgamated with the Howard Association to form the Howard League for Penal Reform, housed at this period in the Fry's front sitting room. From then on the Howard League, which she served as secretary until 1926 and later as chairman and vice-chairman, remained the most important focus of her work. Her understanding of the problems of penal reform was increased by her appointment in 1921 as one of the first women magistrates and in 1922 as the first education advisor to Holloway. In her efforts to improve prison conditions one of the many developments which she initiated was to bring Marlon Richardson in to teach painting to young prisoners. In practice her two main pre-occupations became closely related; visits to universities were combined with visits to prisons; it was sometimes difficult to remember, she once remarked, whether students were in for crimes or prisoners in for examinations.

In 1926, on the retirement of [Dame] Emily Penrose, Sara Margery Fry somewhat reluctantly accepted the principalship of Somerville. In spite of her strong continuing affection for the college, on whose council she had served since 1904, she was genuinely doubtful about her suitability, as 'non-academic' women for the post and the limitations on her independence, which it would involve. But, though finding Oxford in many ways uncongenial and obscurantist, she enjoyed this new opportunity for exercising her remarkable talent for understanding, and unobtrusively advising, the young and opening their minds to her whole wide range of interests, from penal reform to birdwatching.

Although never deeply involved in university politics, she made occasional notable incursions, which left their mark, as when in 1927 she spoke in Congregation with Cyril Bailey in an unsuccessful effort to resist the imposition of a 'numerus clausus' on the women's colleges. Students who came in contact with her were especially impressed by the fact that 'she knew so much about wickedness, and yet could make one believe and work for happy and rational solutions of the most tangled moral and political problems'.

She continued to work on these problems - as a member of the Street Offences Committee [concerned with prostitution and soliciting, but doomed by its composition] and the Young Offenders Committee through which she tried to secure an adequate probation service and to get probation extended to cover a much wider range of offences. But above all she was deeply involved, in association with Roy Calvert, D.N. Pritt, and others, in the campaign for the abolition of Capital Punishment, presenting evidence on behalf of the Howard League to the abortive select committee set up by J.R. Clynes as Home Secretary in 1929.

Generation 12 (con't)

Sara Margery Fry had never intended to spend more than about five years at Somerville. Soon after her retirement in 1931 she established a new base in London, at 48 Clarendon Road, Holland Park, 'absolutely on the borderline of slum and respectability', and filled it with paintings and objects of beauty collected over the years. For the remainder of her life this was her home for the homeless and wanderers of many countries, as well as a meeting- place for radicals and reformers with different interests and shades of opinion.

In the thirties the worsening world situation and her own growing international reputation involved her in a new range of activities, supplementing but not displacing the old. In 1933, shortly after the Japanese invasion of Manchuria, the Universities China Committee invited her to make a lecture tour of Chinese universities. Her interest in the great transformations taking place in Chinese society, as well as in its ancient civilisation, remained intense, expressed both through her friendships with Chinese teachers and students and her work with the China Campaign Committee, for which she lectured and spoke at meetings throughout Britain.

Her understanding of Chinese politics made her particularly concerned to ensure that aid from Britain reached the Chinese Communists and was not directed solely to the Kuomintang Government. During this period also she became increasingly occupied with the problems of penal reform in an international setting, particularly in societies where conditions were worst and factual information most defective. She visited Geneva in 1935 to try to induce the League of Nations to adopt a convention, which would lay down minimum standard rules for the treatment of prisoners. In 1936 she became a member of the Colonial Office's newly established advisory committee on penal reform, and in 1937 she took part in a Howard League mission to study the prisons and penal systems of South- Eastern Europe.

In Britain during the late thirties her political sympathies were with those of the non-Communist Left who were working for some form of Popular Front. She consequently resigned her membership of the Labour Party [which she had joined in 1918] when early in 1939 its executive expelled Sir Stafford Cripps for advocating such a policy. One specific contribution, which she made at this time to the effort to increase the effectiveness of radical intellectuals, was her sponsorship of the serious but short-lived organisation, For Intellectual Liberty.

When war began in 1939 Sara Margery Fry was already sixty-five, no longer able, as in 1914, to move into some entirely different field of work. She carried on with her existing activities as far as practicable, and took on new commitments where this seemed likely to be useful. She continued to serve as a magistrate; worked on her Clarke Hall lecture, 'The Ancestral Child' [never delivered, but published in 1940]; visited France early in 1940 to investigate the problem of intellectual refugees; experienced the blitz; took part in a study of evacuation and evacuees; served, unwillingly, on the government committee on non-enemy interned aliens [those imprisoned under '18B']; wrote with Champion B. Russell an 'A.B.C. for Juvenile Magistrates' [published in 1942 as A Notebook for the Children's Court], regarding 'rational occupation', for herself as for prisoners, as the best remedy for misery.

During the thirties she had discovered that she enjoyed broadcasting and was good at it, and had served for a time as a Governor of the B.B.C. She took part in the earliest series of 'Any Questions?' and in 1942 became a member of the Brains Trust. Although much distressed by the prospect of leaving her sisters for so long a period, she spent the years 1942-3 in the United States, speaking on penal questions, visiting universities and prisons.

During the dozen years of life which remained after the war Margery Fry retained a vigorous interest in the causes with which she had become identified, withdrawing somewhat from active campaigning, but continuing to talk, write and educate with all her old wit and understanding.

Her central ideas on penal reform were set out in the pamphlet, 'The Future Treatment of the Adult Offender [1944]'. These were further developed in her one full-length book 'Arms of the Law [1951]', in which she put together the material which she had collected over the years on the development of crime and punishment in human society and her proposals for future advance.

Some of the many objectives for which had worked, notably the abolition of the death penalty were partially realized in her lifetime. But half-measures, where she knew what ought to be done, left her unsatisfied. And at eighty she still had the freshness of mind to move into new fields and confront new problems: the importance of developing criminology and penology as academic studies; the need to work out a national scheme of compensation for the victims of violence; the problems of the aged, discussed in her address, 'Old Age Looks at Itself [1955]', to the International Association of Gerontology.

But, though any account of Sara Margery Fry's life is bound to pay attention to causes, persons mattered a great deal more to her than causes-or rather, causes were important because they were ways of trying to increase the happiness and diminish the misery of individual people. Deeply disliking all forms of dogmatism, in ethics and politics as well as religion, she believed in working for a world in which the sort of pleasures she valued most- playing the flute, painting pictures, walking in the woods of Provence, enjoying the conversation of friends-could be made as widely available as possible. She died at her home in Clarendon Road, where she could watch the birds in the trees at the back, on the 21st April 1958.

A portrait by Roger Fry is at Somerville College, Oxford.

...'Yet Uncle Joseph had a memorable funeral: the factory choir sang at the graveside, and at the same time as Friends were holding ' a meeting for worship on the occasion of the death of our Friend' a memorial service took place in Bristol Cathedral'.

...'Though Uncle Joseph's interests had seemed strangely limited to his niece, his will was a masterpiece. Night after night he must have sat in his lonely room, parcelling out his huge wealth as if for a great christmas treat. First came gifts to his workers and the great benefactions to Quakers and other causes. Then came the legacies, as one after another this apparently lonely old man remembered those who had shown kindness or need. he had made one miscalculation: He was nearly twice as rich as he had believed himself to be.

... When the residue of the estate was divided Margery Fry found herself with a larger income than a university professor: just ten times as large, by Margery's friend Dr. Fisher reckoning in 1917, as the pay of 42,200 certificated elementary school teachers, men and women.

...She sent off donations everywhere. Early in 1914 she sent in her resignation from University House.

2001...April...I obtained from the Tunbridge Wells Library "Somerville for Women, An Oxford College, 1879-1993, by Pauline Adams". The history of the College and the 'Principalship of Margery Fry". This book was one of two books recommended by the College.

2001...20 April...from the book " Somerville for Women" it states on page 165, ...In May 1926 she [Margery Fry, Principal Elect,] wrote to the then Principal of Somerville, Miss Penrose, 'asking for a delay in taking up her new office [as Principal] until the end of Michaelmas Term... so that she could visit her Nephew Julian Fry in British Columbia, Canada'. There, a Riding accident came near to overturning her plans completely; as she lay awaiting rescue one of her first thoughts was ' I shall not have to go to Somerville after all'.

On page 174...Margery remained in Oxford for less than five years. The death of her mother in the spring of 1930 freed her sister Agnes from the cares of long years of nursing, and made possible the extended travel which they had long hoped to undertake together.

There were better opportunities at the Bristol Wagon Works, originally founded by two Quakers, John Fowler [Inventor of the steam plough] and Albert Fry on Temple Street in 1851. It moved to a 12-acre site on Lawrence Hill in 1866, and there built railway carriages and wagons, road vehicles and [through Fowler was no longer involved in the company] farm implements. The majority of its railway output went abroad, but work for this country included steam rail-motors for which power units were supplied by the Avonside Engine Works off Barton Road, a firm that had specialised in industrial and narrow gauge tank engines since taking over part of the old Avonside Ironworks in 1882. In 1923 the Bristol Wagon Works became part of Cammell, Laird Co Ltd and was closed down; the premises were sold to the Bristol Tramways & Carriage Co.

2011...19 July....Signature

Lawrence Hill- always a major thoroughfare as the route to Kingswood- received the dignity of a railway station when Bristol & South Wales Union Railway opened its line to New Passage [for ferries across the severn] in 1863. This was Bristol's first suburban service, filling a gap quite ignored by the Bristol & Gloucester [later Midland] Railway Line opened back in 1844.

Quotes from the Book 'Sir Edward Fry, by his daughter Agnes: Chapter 2, Page 37....

2001...21 June...Taken from the 'Memoir' of Francis Fry of Bristol, by Theodore Fry, [as taken from "Quakers in Commerce" at Bristol Records Office]...it mentions on page 194... 'Lewis Fry, a solicitor in Bristol, still further extended his own wide connections by his marriage in 1858 to a daughter of Francis Gibson of Saffron Walden, thus becoming related to all the Great Quaker Bankers in London and the country.' He began his Parliamentary career in 1878 as Member for his native town of Bristol and did hard work in the House as chairman of many and important committees. As befitted a Quaker, he was a Liberal; but when he came to the conclusion that Gladstone's Home Rule policy would lead to disaster he crossed the floor to the Unionists- and left that party again when he felt unable to support Chamberlain's Tariff Reform. In Bristol itself Lewis Fry was largely engaged in civic work, particularly on the educational side.

HENRIETTA JANE FRY [JENNY] - born 1840, married William Whitwell 1862, died 1912. Aunt Jenny the youngest of the family was a tall, graceful, fair women, with golden hair, large blue eyes, regular features, and beautiful white hands always well dressed - in later life always in elegant, floating , grey garments, with a large grey hat.

She married when she was 22, William Whitwell, an Ironmaster of Stockton-on Tees, a near relative of the Darlington Pease s. They built a house at Saltburn on the Yorkshire coast, a few years after their marriage. She was the mother of 10 children five handsome sons and five daughters [one of whom died as a little child] - but she used to visit frequently at Charlotte Street and in later days, when her children were grown up, paid long visits at Cote Bank. She was an affectionate, bright women; a great talker, immensely interested in people and gardens, and full of kindness. She carried on a large Mother s Meeting and other philanthropies and various activities in connection with the Society of Friends, of which she was a loyal member, in her hospitable northern home where she was the adored wife and mother.

She gradually lost her eye-sight some 10 or 15 years before her death and was almost blind at the end. She bore the deprivation in a wonderfully cheerful spirit..

2006...26 February...file revised and reprinted following our visit to Cricket St Thomas Hotel which we confirmed was previously the Home & Seat for Francis James Fry from 1897 to 1918 his Death.

2006...20 February...The following information was given to us about the History of The House & Gardens of Cricket St. Thomas.

Cricket St Thomas was a thriving estate before the Domesday Book of 1086. Indeed 'Cricket' is an ancient Anglo Saxon word meaning a ridge or hill. During the 12th and 13th Centuries the occupiers or tenants of the estate were the de Cricket family, but in 1387 the manor was sold to Sir Walter de Rodney, an ancestor of the famous Lord Rodney [1719-1792]. In 1446 the estate was bought by Stephen Preston, whose direct descendants continued to enjoy Cricket for a further 220 years. One of these, Sir Amayas Preston, a seafarer of great skill, is credited with the capture of the admiral of the Spanish Armada.

In 1775 the estate moved to Captain Alexander Hood, later Vice Admiral and Baron Bridport. In 1884 the Baronacy passed to Samuel Hood whose wife Charlotte was a niece of Lord Horatio Nelson.

It was Samuel who landscaped the estate by damming streams to create a chain of lakes, pulling down cottages, as there had been a small village on the western bank of the river, diverting roads, planting fine trees, many of which stand today. His son Alexander Nelson Hood GCB reached the rank of General and later became Lord in waiting to Queen Victoria. He lived at Cricket until 1897 when the estate was sold to the chocolate Manufacturer Francis James Fry and then to the Hall Family in 1920.

And so to 1965 when Cricket House is registered Grade 11* on the English Heritage Register of Historic Parks and Gardens and is therefore of great importance. The development of the Warner Hotel has therefore been executed with great care to assimilate the buildings and other facilities into his landscape. In particular, the setting of Cricket House and St. Thomas's Church were seen as very important and as such were to remain substantially undisturbed by the new development. Thus the Courtyard Bedrooms which lie to the north of Cricket House have been set down onto the lower terrace level so that this building does not compete with the setting of Cricket House, whilst the flight of steps leading from the East Terrace down to the lower Terrace by the East Front of this building reinforces its subservient position. Similarly, development of the Walled Garden Accommodation and Leisure Club have been sympathetically designed to avoid intruding upon St. Thomas's Church, whilst the cruciform arrangement has allowed existing trees to be maintained and provides for a series of courtyard gardens giving pleasing settings to the bedrooms.

2001...20 June...At Bristol Records Office/Archives of J.S.Fry & Sons/ Notes on the Pedigree of the Family of Fry, by Sir John Pease Fry, Page 2, it says...In 1894 Mr. Theodore Fry, upon being created a Baronet, found himself obliged to obtain a certificate from this body [The College of Arms] to the effect that he was entitled to these arms, and after considerable controversy agreed to register for himself a new coat. In consideration, however, of his strong presumptive claim to use the old one , the new coat registered was the old one with a slight "difference", viz., Per foose ? Gulow ? and Sable, three horses courant in pale Argent, two Flaunces of the last each charged with a horseshoe of the second. Crest---a dexter arm embowed in armour proper garnished , or the hand grasping a sword also proper, the pommel and hilt or between two horseshoes Sable, together with the old family motto, "Estofidelis".

Generation 12 (con't)

2001...20 June...We found a copy of the book "Quakers in Commerce" in Bristol Records Office when on a visit, and in it was "Memoir of Francis Fry of Bristol by his son Theodore Fry. M.P. as follows: Page 194, "... In the next generation, too, that of the great-grandsons of Dr. Joseph Fry, members of the family made their mark in various fields. Francis Fry, the collector of books and director of railway companies [and brother to Edward and Lewes], had three notable sons- Francis James, of J.S. Fry & Sons; Theodore; and John Doyle Fry, the printer and stationer.

John Doyle Fry's brother -in -law, Robert Barclay, [1] a lineal descendant of Robert Barclay the Apologist and himself an authority on the early history of the Society, had in 1855 bought a stationer's business dating back to 1799. When the two relatives joined in 1867, under the title of the new partnership two great Quaker names were coupled together- Barclay & Fry. Robert Barclay was responsible for three important inventions: he designed the two-revolution printing press; he solved the problem of how to make the paper used for cheques chemically protected [the cheque books of a very great number of banks in this country are printed by Barclay & Fry]; and thirdly he devised the process of printing on tin, from which has developed an extensive business in decorated tin boxes. On Robert Barclay's death in 1876 John Doyle Fry bought out the Barclay interest and twenty years later had the Grove Works built in Southwark which are still the headquarters of the firm. John Fry, son of John Doyle Fry, the last chairman who was a member of the Fry family, retired in 1936 and Barclay & Fry, Ltd. Is continued as a branch of the Metal Box Co.,Ltd., [1] but is engaged in all the same processes as when under the old management.

[1] Robert Barclay of Reigate, the son of John Barclay of London and grandson of Robert Barclay of Clapham Common, had married in 1857 Sarah Matilda, sister of his Partner Fry.

Notes for Edward John Etheridge:

Fry Family Tree Item No. 12

1858... Born...

1884...6 October...At age 26, Edward Married Francis Eleanor Mary Fry, age 24, of 4, High Street, Hastings. His father is John Henry Etheridge, Gentleman who we know is a Banker.

Jackie has checked the Marriage Registers and say's the name Etheridge is very common and may be difficult to follow.

1998...10 July... I telephoned the Parish Priest and he said he would willingly provide a copy of the Marriage certificate.

1998...11 July...We visit the church and the Parish Priest Fr. Daly has the certificate ready. He tells us that the church was built by a Painter / Artist to commemorate his wife. We noticed that there was a notice board celebrating the Centenary of the church in 1983, and it lists all the Parish Priests since the church opened in 1883. The Marriage was one of the first held there and is listed on page 3 of the Register. The Priest who carried out the service did not become the PP until about 20 years later. We are told that all the priests come from the same Order now as they did in 1883. This is 'The Pallatines' from St. Peters, Hatton Garden from the Society of the Catholic Apostle. The founder St. Vincent Pallotti.

1998...13 July...We visit Hastings Reference Library but can find no trace of Edith Fry or Herbert on the 1881 Census. We looked at 'The Hastings and St Leonards Observer' for the 11 October 1884. There is no Fry listing, even the Following Week. We also look at 'The Times' for that Week also and there is no listing of marriage on the front page or mention in the following week.

1998...14 July...Hastings Museum phoned to advise that the owner of 4, High St was a Elizabeth Lord and the Occupier was Wiliam Pont a Sailmaker. The Museum could only find 3 other Fry's in the town at the time, none of which could match ours.

2003...25 May...No trace 1901 Census

2006...12 September ...found 1901 Census

2006...12 September...On freeDeaths...no trace up to 1910

1998...6 January...at FRC...Ordered Birth Certificate. Wrong one ordered. 24/2/98...At FRC...Re-ordered & Rec'd 27/2/98. Ok This time.

Jackie has looked up Marriages to 1895, and I have looked 1896-1898..No find.

1998...21 July...At FRC...checking 1891 census for whereabouts of remaining Family we checked 'Newlands', Claremont Road, Highgate, Ref. RG12/ 1061 Folio 5 page 3, we found the house to be 'Unoccupied.' This means they were 'not at home or away for the day' or had Moved, which is most likely.

2001...20 November...we have found details of her Father and Mothers Grave at Hither Green Cemetery and Kate Louise was buried, a Spinster, on 2 November 1905 in the same Grave

2001...22 October...Jackie & I visit Hither Green Cemetery, Catford and find the Grave of William Rowlands, Sarah Ann & Kate Louisa [Katie] Fry in Grave 413, Plot B, Grant 1183. The Type of Memorial is A Marble Cross and 2 Cubes. The Memorial is in remarkable condition apart from being 'Dirty' and needs the 'Chips' renewing, which we intend to do in the future. On the stone Kate is shown in brackets as 'Katie'.

2002...2 December...I Realise at Elizabeth's 40th Annivervy, that the painting of the 'Flower Girl' she has, was painted by 'Kate'. The original was painted by William Logsdail in 1888. This painting has to be almost 100 years old because Kate died in 1905.

2003...24 February...A copy of the above Painting was shown in the 'Family History Monthly Magazine , in December 2002'. A scanned copy is in the file.

Paul Gurney Fry ("Paul")

Paul started school a year younger than was usual as he was just five years old. His enrolment was needed to make up the official number of students to open the Benger School.

He was a quiet boy, although very competitive and he enjoyed all sports, especially tennis.

After attending Benger State School he went to Guildford Grammar School in Perth before returning to farm "Shenfield"

During World War 2 he was a member of the 2nd/28th Regiment and after some months of training in Queensland he was sent to Borneo to help fight what was to be the last battle of the war against the Japanese. After the War he returned home to "Shenfield" where he continued to work the farm. He never married and at the time of writing (1994) he is aged eight-one years, he is still riding and he is still actively working on the farm.

Generation 13 (con't)

Richenda Elizabeth Fry ("Edith", later "Elizabeth")

Elizabeth first attended Benger State School and then went to Perth College. After school she spent three years at "Shenfield" before beginning her training as a nurse at the Children's Hospital in Perth (now called "The Princess Margaret Hospital for Children") as nurses could not begin their training until they were twenty years old.

She completed her training and received a gold medal for being the best nurse of her year. During the next few years she travelled and gained further qualifications, in midwifery, at the Women's Hospital in Melbourne.

In 1941 she was sent to the Middle East as part of the 2nd/5th Army General Hospital Unit and served at Gaza in Southern Palestine, where she met up with her brother Sam, and they spent some time together visiting Haifa, Tel Aviv and Jerusalem. After Gaza she returned to work in Australia before going overseas again, this time to Port Moresby and Lae in New Guinea. She was sent back to Australia at the end of the War, but was soon sent overseas again in 1946, this time to Japan to care for the occupation force. She was in Japan for fifteen months.

When Elizabeth returned to Australia she gained further qualifications by training as a Child Health Sister. She was working as a private nurse on Ocean Island when she was offered a position as aide to a family attached to the Foreign Office who had been seconded to Commonwealth Relations in Canberra and who were about to return to England. Elizabeth travelled with them caring for their nineteenth month old daughter. She then spent the next fifteen months working and touring England and Europe before returning home to Australia.

In 1955 Elizabeth was working in Busselton when her mother, Mabel, aged eighty-one years old, died of a stroke. Elizabeth resigned her position as child health sister to return to "Shenfield". Her brother Ott returned to "Shenfield" the following year, having been diagnosed with inoperable cancer. Ott's wife Barbara and Elizabeth nursed Ott until he passed away five months later. In 1958. Elizabeth's father, Stephen, died. Later that year Elizabeth began working as a relief nurse with the Child Health Services.

The next year she was offered a position with the Save the Children Fund and was sent overseas to South Korea where she worked for sixteen months.

Afterwards she returned to Australia and again worked with the Child Health Services in Perth. Five months after returned from Korea, in March, 1961 Elizabeth married Cedric Evans.

The "Crendon Frys"

John and Mary Fry had their first son on Dec. 23 1917 and named him Philip Gurney Fry (Phillip). A second son George Leake Fry (Geordie) arrived in 1919. Their first daughter, Elizabeth Fry (EO) was born in 1921, closely followed by another daughter, Rachel Gurney Fry (Rachel) in 1922. Four years later John Michael Partridge Fry (Michael) was born, and their last child, a son, was born in 1932 and named Timothy Clifton Fry (Tim).

Everyone helped on the farm. The children were encouraged to learn all aspects of farming from milking to growing vegetables. They often had several animals as pets and were encouraged to take responsibility for raising their own calf. Calf Clubs usually attached to schools in the area, organised field days, where parades, judging of the best calves, and other agricultural activities were held. The young Club members acted as junior stewards at the District Agricultural Shows. The Junior Farmers' movement followed on from the Calf Clubs.

The house on "Crendon" was extended to provide extra bedrooms and a large building to the rear was built which was named the Nursery.

John helped Mary with the household chores and was the "breadmaker" of the family. He mixed the dough for baking. All the cooking was done on a large wood stove with two large ovens and a hob on the side. A big cauldron at the back kept a ready supply of hot water.

For his first year of schooling Philip was taught at home by correspondence lessons but the next year 1926, his brother George was old enough to go to school and both boys were enrolled in Donnybrook State School. In 1930 an assisted school was opened at 'Crendon'.

Many children lived too far out of town to attend the State School and so country families with school-aged children were given the option of opening their own small school which was used by the children of nearby families. These schools were referred to as "assisted" schools and the cost of hiring the teacher was jointly met by the families and the State Government.

For the first few weeks after the school opened it was held in the "Crendon" nursery but later an old workman's cottage, known as Scott's cottage, was renovated. The cottage's two small rooms were made into a larger one and the old newspaper which was covering the walls was stripped off and replaced with wallpaper. There was an open fireplace for heating the building in winter.

The first teacher to arrive was Miss Annie Henry and she was provided with room and board at 'Crendon', in the house with the Fry family.

Six children attended the 'Crendon School' in the first year. They were Geordie, Elizabeth and Rachel Fry; Jim Robertson (who was the son of the workman employed at 'Crendon'); Lester and Len Trigwell.

Miss Henry, the teacher, resigned in 1932 immediately after Mary returned from Perth having given birth to Tim, saying she "could not possibly live in a house with a baby". The next teacher to arrive was Miss Hazel Crabbe who stayed twelve months and left to get married.

Jean Lawrie was the teacher who took over the school in 1935 and Miss Doris Hotchin came in 1936. That year the school was moved to Englishfield, and are closeby. The Fry family of Crendon continued to provide the teacher's accommodation and Miss Hotchin rode her bicycle to the school each day.

Life was busy for John and Mary Fry but they both found time to involve themselves in the community and they were members of various committees.

Mary was a very good pianist. She could sight read music and during the 1930s and 40s she would play to the family every Sunday night. She would also play each Christmas morning and the family would sing carols together.

Generation 13 (con't)

The family got their first radio in 1933. It was a Batty Phone and was operated from a six volt battery and set of three forty-five volt dry cells, as the State's Electricity system was not connected to the farm until the late 1950s. One of Mary's favourite programs on the radio was the serial "Blue Hills" which was broadcast at 1pm each day.

Late in 1935 John became ill. His health deteriorated over the next few months and he died in March 1936. That year was a very difficult time for the family as a few months after John died, young Rachel became pregnant and at the end of the year Michael had a serious accident.

In 1936 both Rachel and Elizabeth were attending Perth College. When it became obvious Rachel, aged fourteen, was pregnant, Mary travelled up to Perth to be with her and arranged that she spend the rest of her pregnancy in the Salvation Army Hostel until her baby was born. Rachel's daughter was born on September 15th and arrangements were made for her to be adopted.

Postscript. Rachel has since relocated her daughter. She made contact with Joy in 1989 and has discovered she is grandmother to another two children, Faye and Alison. Joy and Rachel exchange letters and visit each other regularly.

A few weeks after Rachel had her baby, Michael aged 10 years old, had a serious accident. He ran in front of the farm's hay mower and his feet and ankles were badly cut. Philip and Mary drove him to Perth on a mattress in the back of the ute where he was treated by Dr. Ainslie, a surgeon of Mount St.

Hospital. Luckily his feet were saved, but it took many months before he could walk again.

On September, 3 1939, at around 8.45pm the Prime Minister of Australia announced over the radio.....

Fellow Australians, it is my melancholy duty to inform you officially that, in consequence of a persistence by Germany in her invasion of Poland, Great Britain has declared war upon her and that as a result, Australia is also at war.

Over the next few months Philip and Geordie both enlisted for active service, but Philip was manpowered out of active service to run the farm. Elizabeth was working away as a teacher. Rachel left school to return to 'Crendon' and help on the farm and Michael and Tim continued their education.

The War officially ended September, 2nd, 1945.

Transcript of "Notes" on The Pedigree of the Family of Fry, by Sir John Pease Fry. Second Great Grandson of Dr. Joseph Fry

These notes were written by Sir John Pease Fry of Cleveland Lodge, Great Ayton, Middlesborough in June 1906. He was our Fifth Cousin Three Times Removed.

The Original of these notes were found by Jackie & David on the 20th June 2001 in the Archives of Messrs. J.S. Fry & Sons, Chocolate Makers of Bristol, which are kept in the Bristol Records Office under the Ref. 38538/12/1 and are marked " Not to be removed from Library".

Notes

This pedigree of the Fry family, carefully compiled from original sources has now been exactly verified by the College of Arms, under the supervision of C. H. Athill, Esquire, Richmond Herald, and with the exception of a few names distinguished by the mark [*] has been registered and recorded for the use of future generations. That the Frys were settled in and around Malmesbury and Corston in the County of Wilts at a very early period is undoubted and proved by numerous church monuments and entries in various documents. The name is variously represented in medieval rolls by le Frye or le Frie, and later by Frye or Frie. One Galfridus le Frye appears in the Wiltshire Hundred Rolls temp Henry 111., a John and Richard le Frye and a William le Frie in that of Edward 1., and the name occurs frequently in the County records of a later date. It has however, been found impossible to prove beyond doubt the exact descent of any generations prior to those shewn in the Pedigree.

It has long been traditionally supposed that the family was of Norman origin and derived its name from the village of Fry in Normandy, situated about thirty miles north-west of Rouen, and close to the town of Gournay-en-Bray, the reputed home of the Gurney family. There seems, however, no other evidence in favour of this tradition, and it has been pointed out that had this been the case the early form of the name would probably have appeared as de Fry and not le Fry. Such a family no doubt existed, and a Nicholas de Fry appears to have been the subject of some enquiries made by Edward 1. in Lincolnshire; and the name spelt in one word still exists in England.

But the family of Fry is almost certainly of Saxon origin and the name, or nickname, signifies the "freeman", and is a Saxon or English word.

How anxious, says Mr. Bardsley in his well known work on English surnames, those Saxon husbandman were who had been free to "preserve themselves from a doubtful or suspected position" such names as Walter le Free will fully shew. "In Frys a sobriquet that has acquired much honour of late" years and is represented in mediaeval rolls by such entries as "le Frye or le Frie, we have but an obsolete rendering of free".

Living within the sphere of influence of the great Abbey of Malmesbury, it is probable that the Frys, like so many other English freeman in mediaeval times, suffered at the hands both of the Church and Crown, and had little love for either, a trait long noticeable in our own and other branches of the family, and particularly prominent in the history of John Fry [1609-1657], the regicide member for Dorsetshire in the Long Parliament, who himself had probably a Wiltshire origin and whose family was possibly connected with our own. William Fry, of Sutton Benger [1627-1698], a sturdy Puritan, was one of the earliest adherents of George Fox, and a century later we find Joseph Fry, of Bristol [1728-1787], displaying the same characteristic family tendencies [see Latimer's "Annals of Bristol," p. 178].

With reference to the coat of arms, the white horses and the "dexter arm embowed in armour" borne for centuries by one or other of the branches of the Fry family, were charges clearly appropriate to a freedom loving family, and the white horses in harmony with a pre-Norman origin. The question has been raised in comparatively recent times whether our own early Wiltshire ancestors were an "armigerous" family, although it is beyond doubt that for very many generations they have borne and used the arms shown on this pedigree, viz. :Gules three horses courant in pale Argent. It is certain that these arms were borne by a family of Fry settled at Yarty, near Axminster, as early as the reign of Edward 1V., and their claim was admitted by the Heralds on more than one Visitation, but this branch of the Fry family is now extinct. Mr. Francis Fry, F.S.A. [1803-1886], had in his possession a pedigree of his family compiled by the late Mr. Edmund Hogg Fry, containing the following note, " John Fry, of Sutton Benger [1701-1775], had a parchment in his possession with these arms emblazoned and signed by the Clarencieux King of Arms, which he affirmed had been in his family some generations. This came into the possession of Mr. William Fry, the Banker [his son], who sent it to China to have a dinner set painted from it whence it never returned ". There seems no reason to doubt the veracity of this note .

The practice of ordering such services from China was fashionable at the time and many specimen plates may now be seen at the British Museum.

Moreover, some of this dinner service still exists and a plate belonging to it is now in the possession of Mr. Francis J. Fry, of Cricket St. Thomas, and exactly corresponds with the arms as already described and a book plate of John Fry, of Sutton Benger, in the writer's possession.

It may be supposed that such a claim, coupled with a user over so many generations, of arms which were undoubtedly granted to a member of the family of Fry, was sufficient proof, and it is probable that the somewhat lax practice of the Heralds' College in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries would have been satisfied with considerably less. But the records of the College of Arms are not absolutely complete and, up to the present date, it has not been possible to prove any record of a grant by the Clarencieux King made to John Fry or any of his direct ancestors. The practice of the Heralds' College has of late years passed from one extreme to the other, and until further proof of the descent of John Fry, of Sutton Benger, from the original grantee of these arms or the unlooked for recovery of the original parchment once in his possession, the College of Arms cannot be compelled to admit our claim to use them . In 1894 Mr. Theodore Fry, upon being created a Baronet, found himself obliged to obtain a certificate from this body to the effect that he was entitled to these arms, and after considerable controversy agreed to register for himself a new coat. In consideration, however, of his strong presumptive claim to use the old one , the new coat registered was the old one with a slight "difference", viz., Per foose ? Gulow ? and Sable, three horses courant in pale Argent, two Flaunces of the last each charged with a horseshoe of the second. Crest---a dexter arm embowed in armour proper garnished , or the hand grasping a sword also proper, the pommel and hilt or between two horseshoes Sable, together with the old family motto, "Estofidelis".

Before leaving the subject it may be observed that, as it would have been quite contrary to heraldic practice to make two identical grants of arms , the natural inference to be drawn is that John Fry was himself a lineal descendant of an original grantee. The charge he claimed, viz., three horses courant Argent, has been borne by the Frys in the adjoining counties of Dorset and Somerset [as well as those in Devon], though on a field Vert , in one case differenced by a fleur-de-lys. The Wiltshire Frys held land of the Crown in 1553 and thought it worth while to embark on a Chancery suit in reference thereto in the reign of Elizabeth, a costly undertaking in those days, especially for persons living at a distance from London.

It may seem optimistic to expect that, after a lapse of two centuries, further evidence can be brought to light, but in the meantime it also seems impossible to suppose that any member of the Fry family living between the years 1500-1700 should have cared to possess himself of a forged grant of arms and to have used a coat to which he knew he was not entitled.

This indeed, seems the only possible alternative, and presents greater difficulties than the solution already suggested. Both John Fry and his father were strict and simplicity loving Quakers. John Fry's poems which are to a considerable extent autobiographical, are still in existence, and no one acquainted with his character could for a moment believe that he would take the smallest trouble to possess himself of a coat of arms or have any interest in using one unless in accordance with the strictest right and family practice. Sir Edward Fry, whose legal and antiquarian knowledge must be almost conclusive on any such point, has always declined to make use of any but the old family coat. "quiet Quakers," he writes to me, "are of all people the least likely to have put forward an unfounded "claim to armorial bearings." This coupled with "the fact that the arms have been handed down our family" is, he thinks, " cogent to prove that the family were really entitled to use their use." Unfortunately the College of Arms does not apparently realise the weight of this evidence, and in the meantime if further and absolutely conclusive proof is not forthcoming, the blame must be laid at the door of Mr. William Fry.

I am much indebted to my brother T.W. Fry, for his assistance in the preparation of these notes.

Henry Partridge Fry, "The Second", was the first descendant of the Fry's to be born at Shenfield. His cousin Walter Partridge was one of his closest friends and the two young men began taking out the sisters Hope and Aileen Eastman, who were the daughters of a prominent Bunbury Lawyer. Henry married Aileen Eastman when he was twenty-one years old and Walter later married Hope Eastman.

Henry's parents purchased Langham a property located close to Shenfield for the newly weds. He became well known for his generosity, often giving freely to anyone in need. He was a genial host at the frequent parties he held at Langham and he was a very loving and tolerant father.

Henry Partridge Fry and Aileen Eastman had the following children:

By William Stephen Fry ("Bill")

Henry and I were taught at home by a governess when we were small. When we were older we went to high school for two years in Bunbury and boarded with the Mitchell Aunts. Amy and Kate. then we went away to Guildford Grammar. Oz was one year younger and he was with me at Guildford. I hated it. Not because I was dumb.... I liked school work but I hated being away from home. I was always shy. I couldn't take it. I was sixteen and should have been hardened off a bit by the two years in Bunbury, but I wasn't.. After school I went home for good.

At home we used to attend church regularly and I can remember prayers being said every morning before work when we were young. They were generally said after breakfast for a couple of minutes. And we never had any strong drink in the house. I never tasted strong drink till I was thirty-five.

I didn't get married until I was forty-four years old. My brother Henry had married when he was twenty-one and my Father had said to me "Don't you ever think of it!") The War stopped me anyway. I had to stay home and look after the farm. Paul, Sam and Edith went away to the War.

We were farming potatoes mostly then, they were about half the income. We also milked cows and ran a few sheep. We butchered them ourselves and distributed it around. There was no refrigeration.

We used to send a bag or two away on the train. We'd milk the cows by hand. I was about six or seven years old when I started milking. Then when I was about twelve years old we got a milking machine. We were one of the first in the district to get a machine. We got more cows but we didn't seem to be any better off. The farms kept getting bigger to service. Used to be that a family could exist off a hundred acres. The first Cattle Sale we went to there was thirty cows for sale Now there's never less than three hundred. Now farmers direct sell to the butchers. It's all different.

Generation 14 (con't)

William Stephen Fry and Peggy Stewart had the following children:

- i. KAY¹⁵ FRY was born in 1952 (Bunbury, Western Australia).
186. ii. WENDY FRY was born in 1955 (Bunbury, Western Australia). She married STUART R.B. CRAMOND. He was born about 1951.
187. iii. MAX STEPHEN STEWART FRY was born in 1957 (Bunbury, Western Australia). He married (1) SUSANNE CONNOP. She was born about 1957 (Western Australia). He married (2) SONJA HEASMAN. She was born about 1954.
- iv. STEWART HENRY WILLIAM FRY was born in 1961 (Bunbury, Western Australia). He died in 1961 in Bunbury, Western Australia.

Oswald Frederick Fry ("Os" or Ott")

Ott became the engineer of the Shenfield half of the Fry family. After attending Benger State School he spent two years at Bunbury High before going to Perth to attend Guildford Grammar School. He then went on to attend the University of Western Australia where he studied engineering. He loved sport and he excelled in rowing and was on the King's Cup Rowing Team twice during his years at University.

After his graduation he went to Kalgoorlie to work at the Big Bell mine as a mechanical Engineer, and in 1939 he married Barbara Malcom. They lived in various states of Australia as Ott's career developed and he was offered more challenging positions.

While working in Yallourn, Victoria, Ott designed and developed the largest conveyer to be built in the Southern Hemisphere.

When he was working in Mt. Isa, Queensland, he ran an Agricultural Show to raise money to build a new Anglican Church to replace the existing old iron building. He also organised Art shows in Mt. Isa and through his efforts a permanent Art Gallery was established.

Ott had just been asked to organise the three million pound extensions to the mine at Mt. Isa when he became ill. He was diagnosed with inoperable cancer.

He asked to return to Shenfield where he was nursed by his wife Barbara and his sister Edith. He died in 1957.

Oswald Frederick Fry and Barbara Malcolm had the following children:

188. i. PATRICIA¹⁵ FRY was born in 1941 (Western Australia). She married NEVILLE DAVIS. He was born about 1938 (Western Australia).
189. ii. IAN STEPHEN FRY was born in 1943. He married JILL STEWART HIGHET. She was born about 1945.
190. iii. RICHARD FRY was born in 1945. He married HELEN BRANDENBERG. She was born about 1945.
156. JOSEPH GURNEY¹⁴ FRY (Stephen Henry¹³, Henry Partridge¹², Joseph¹¹, Joseph¹⁰, William⁹, Richard⁸, Zephaniah⁷, William⁶, Alexander⁵, Robert⁴, William³ Frye, John² Frye, John¹ Frye) was born on 15 Jan 1911 (Shenfield, Western Australia). He died on 01 Jan 2012 in Western Australia.

Generation 14 (con't)

He married Lillian Pearson on 15 Dec 1934 in Western Australia. She was born in 1913 (Western Australia).

Notes for Joseph Gurney Fry:

2002...16 November...Letter from Joan Fry in Mandurah, Western Australia also sends us part of a booklet called 'The Fry's of Shenfield & Crendon' celebrating the Fry's Centenary in Australia, in 1994. The 'Generations List' shows the following on page 9...

Joseph Gurney Fry ("Gurney")

I can remember being taught at home by a governess before I went to school. The Benger State School opened when I was about seven years old and I was one of the first pupils. Paul had to come too, to make up the numbers and he was only five. The school was first held in the Benger Hall and sometime later they built a new building.

I went to Guildford Grammar from 1925 to 1928. I liked maths and I won the maths prize first year I was there. I went back for the first term in 1928 to help Paul settle in. Paul and I played tennis together at times. I liked sports. We used to have tennis parties at Benger when I was at home.. I studied piano for a few years but now I can't play at all.

We used to eat what we grew and we did well. Always plenty of food. Mum used to bake cakes. Her speciality was meringues. And we ate parrot stew. It was very nice. Sometimes ducks from the Benger swamp. But I was never a duck shooter. I used to plant the potatoes. My fingers would be cracked from the clay. After we planted we would put superphosphate in the furrows and I would go along and put sulphate of ammonia on top. we had about 10 acres of spuds, which were all harvested and bagged by hand. Some diggers could bag 40-50 bags a day.

I started going with a local girl named Lillian Pearson in the 1930s. We going for about two or three years and we announced our engagement June 6 1934. Dad looked around for a farm for us and bought "Brentwood", a property a few kilometers from "Shenfield" I went out and lived on the property on August 6 and batched until December 15, when we got married. We went to Perth to Forrest House for our honeymoon. One day we caught the train to Maylands and walked out to the aerodrome to go for a joyride in a small plane.

I never worried about things on the farm. I generally just did things. Picked up hints from the others.

I milked cows for a few months at first but then that was the end of that. I didn't want to milk cows for a living. Irrigation for the farms from the Collie scheme at Wellington Weir had been going less than a year at that stage. I'd bought a few sheep and when they were sold I got thirty-six pounds profit to the end of June. We survived. We planted paspalum and wild white clover to improve the pasture. I grew a few potatoes. I would buy cattle and build them up and re-sell later. I bought another hundred acres next door and then later another hundred down the road.

Joseph Gurney Fry and Lillian Pearson had the following children:

191. i. JOHN GURNEY¹⁵ FRY was born in 1935 (Western Australia). He married MERRILEE MCLEOD. She was born in 1940 (Western Australia).

Samuel Gurney Fry ("Sam")

I went to the Benger School first, then to Guildford Grammar in the City. Afterwards I worked on the farm until the War. They had wanted me to join up before the War started but I said, "Nothing doing" I'm not a peacetime soldier for anybody" but then the War started and I decided to join the Army. I was in the 10th Light Horse. They had us three months in camp at Naval Base to train.

After the training it was the end of the Light Horse Regiment as there were no horses - it was all mechanical. We were lucky to join the 2nd/28th Battalion 9th Division which was just being formed.

We were always at the right place at the right time. We went to Northam for more training for six months, then we had Christmas leave, and then on Jan. 3 1941 we hopped on the boat - the "Equatania" and left Fremantle for the Middle East. We were over there until Feb. 19, 1943. We were there just over two years. We had a good trip. Initially we went to Cairo in Palestine and we were then sent to Tobruk to get some training but then the Germans surrounded the city and the training was over. We were shut in. they couldn't get in and we couldn't get out. After that we were sent to Palestine again.

Then we went to train in Syria and it was cold with snow on the ground. We thought perhaps I had appendicitis as well, so they took my appendix out. That made me really sick. I was crook for quite a while then because I had to get over both, the dysentery and the operation, I was seven weeks in Hospital. A week before I got out of hospital my mob were taken to El Alamein. So I was never a prisoner of war. I came home with a tin hat with a hole right the way through. I was very lucky. All I got was a slight graze. We came back in February and we got sent to train in Queensland. We were sent off again in October to New Guinea for six months. I malaria after I came back.

Samuel Gurney Fry and Patricia Eve Johnson had the following children:

195. i. BETTY ANN¹⁵ FRY was born in 1946. She married ROBERT J. JEFFREY. He was born about 1943.

Alice Gurney Fry ("Alice")

"I went to Benger School first and then later to Perth College. When I was old enough I left school but I loved music so even when I was living at home, I still travelled into Bunbury once a week to continue learning the piano. I caught the train, the Old Rattler.

I can still remember the sound of the frogs at Burekup Station as I waited for my train. If I could I would have played the music the frogs made. Sometimes I would be there alone, listening in the dark, waiting for another train. The War came the following year.

I enjoyed tennis and all sports. I loved sport. When we were younger, before the War, we had a tennis court at "Shenfield" in front of the house and we had a tennis party every Sunday . It was our main entertainment. We used to mow the court with hand mower - the boys pushing and me pulling. We had lots of visitors but then the War came and people weren't around any more. Bill was the only one home.

When the War came, Dad and Bill had to work so hard. They still had to grow the same amount of potatoes, but everyone was away. It was so difficult working in the swamp. I remember on several occasions Dad got his feet stuck and couldn't get out. We had to rescue him by pulling him out of his boots".

Phillip Gurney Fry ("Phillip")

Phillip first started his education at home by correspondence before he was enrolled in Donnybrook State School. After primary school he spent one year at Hale School in Perth before completing a further two years at Bunbury High School. While in Bunbury he boarded with Mrs. Webster who lived in the Back Beach area. After secondary school he attended the Narrogin School of Agriculture for two years.

He was very mechanically minded and was always adapting or inventing something for the farm. He invented an automatic start-up for the farm's petrol driven 32v electricity system, which allowed it to be controlled from the house, and he also modified one of the farm's old Fordson tractors so that it ran on one cylinder which was then used to drive a centrifugal pump which sent water up to the dam supplying the house.

He was often thinking up ways of moving and storing water and he began formulating a plan to build a dam on 'Crendon' After many years of planning, the construction began in 1955. The dam took a couple of years to complete and once finished held 80,000,000 gallons of water. It was later extended to hold 200,000,000gallons. The original wall to the dam has since been extended and it can now hold up to 360,000,000gallons.

He was an active member of the Farmers' Union and Farm Advisory Group and was President of the committee for both organisations. He was also the Chairman of the Preston Co-op where he was a director. Other organisations of which he was a member included the Parents and Citizens Group,

Late in 1935 John became ill. His health deteriorated over the next few months and he died in March 1936. That year was a very difficult time for the family as a few months after John died, young Rachel became pregnant and at the end of the year Michael had a serious accident.

In 1936 both Rachel and Elizabeth were attending Perth College. When it became obvious Rachel, aged fourteen, was pregnant, Mary travelled up to Perth to be with her and arranged that she spend the rest of her pregnancy in the Salvation Army Hostel until her baby was born. Rachel's daughter was born September 15 and arrangements were made for her to be adopted.

Postscript. Rachel has since relocated her daughter. She made contact with Joy in 1989 and has discovered she is grandmother to another two children, Faye and Alison. Joy and Rachel exchange letters and visit each other regularly.

Notes for Jacqueline Lilian Woodward:

1947...16 March...Born at Redhill County Hospital, Edgware, Middx, Ref 127 2000...5 December...

Norman Dewdney died today.

2000...14 December...Jackie's Cousin Norman Dewdney was cremated today at Brightlingsea, Essex

2000...15 December...email to Mike & Janet Smith on Holiday for Xmas in the Caymen Islands....

"Karen had innocently phoned 'Uncle Dickie' to tell him that Norman had just died and apparently the old man just laughed his head off and thought it was a big joke and a wind up. She did not know all the family had completely stopped having anything to do with him and when we were mentioned he 'exploded with so much venom about us all' Karen got so upset about it she put the phone down on him. She later got a letter of apology and a donation. She says she will never speak to him again. Nobody said what was to happen on tuesday next...it was not the time.

Barry told 'Nicola' that he [the old man] was not wanted at the funeral in case he caused trouble and apparently the local Police were notified to tell him he would be stopped if he tried to come.

Barry & Brenda picked up Alan & Val at Watford and we met at the house.

About 20 + Family met there and we all walked behind the Coffin, which was draped with the Union Jack, his Cap and Medals, for about 1/2 mile to the church in the town. Outside there was a 'Guard of Honour ' of about 8-10 Bearers with, Caps & Medals and what appeared to be Regimental Flags. Inside the church were at least 400 mourners, it was full. We were ushered to the front two rows.

Norman was apparently 2nd in Command of the R.E.M.E. Regiment at Colchester and one of the Glowing Tributes, 'Norman, soldier and Friend' was given by his Commanding Officer Lt. Colonel John Caldreath, including mention that at an Interview for Promotion, Norman was asked 'What Sports did he play'. "None, Sir, was his reply". That evening, Norman became an Umpire at the Regimental Cricket Match and continued to learn more about the game and umpiring it over the years and was known for his extreem fairness in the game. He retired the Services in 1991as we know.

Norman then became Head of Trinity House in charge of Maintenance of all the Countries Lightships and Stations and a further Tribute was given by Commodore Peter Melsom, RN.. "if it was 'stationery' it was painted, if it was'nt, it was painted anyway" sort of thing.

A further address was given by Graeme about his Dad.

Yet another address was given by Mr Graham Bullock of The Association of Cricket Umpires and Scorers. Norman had got to the 'top of the tree' of this Association also, and took up the Top Appointment of it on October 1st.

After the service all the Family & Friends took a 1/2 mile walk down to the river where a reception was held for about 400 at the Colne Yacht Club.

When I hear from Barry 'next tuesday', I will let you know what has happened.!

Love

Jackie & David"

I hope you are both keeping well and you have enjoyed your garden this summer, weather permitting. Hilda tells me you have been away.

I am writing to tell you that we lost our youngest Brother Michael on the 11th August. He died suddenly in Ireland. We have been 'going out quit a lot' since to try to think of 'other things'. I still, sometimes, cannot talk about him.

Mike and Wendy, his wife, 'emigrated' to Ireland just over 3 years ago, after their shop closed, to escape the rat race and to find some peace and quite. After a few months they bought an old cottage with some grounds to keep their horse and five dogs, and soon they bought a donkey and an Irish Wolf Hound Puppy as well.

The house had not been lived in for about 9 years and was truly in a pitiful state. It defies our belief that they bought it, complete with chronic damp, millions of bees in the chimney, and an electric light bulb and most important of all, the stables.

They set too and started to get the place around and a year or so later Jackie and I went over to see them. The house was being transformed. A great deal of work had been done all by themselves and there was plenty more to do, and they carried on improving the place.

About a year ago they were offered a '6 acre field' about 60 miles away, on a hill, out in the sticks, up a mountain, near Nenagh, Tipperary, with fantastic views, and the nearest neighbour ½ mile away on the other side of a valley, and no sign of any other living human.. Their dream had come true and they would build their own house on it and enjoy their animals in the tranquillity of Ireland. Etc. etc.

They purchased a caravan to live in, sold the first home, and moved on to the site in May this year. No water, gas, electric, sewage or phone. They laid in a road to put the caravan on, and pegged out the 6 acres .gota borehole dug 200 feet down for the water, and got a mobile phone.

They then realised that their ambitious plan was going to cost far more than they had anticipated, and they would have to lower their sights to building only a bungalow and not a house on the site.

Many times I spoke to Mike and reminded him he was 58 years of age and doing what he was doing was going to be exceptionally hard work, although he had been doing this all his life. He was never happier, when he had a spade or hammer, screwdriver or cement to hand, to build something Always. working.

Mike was digging a hole in the field and came into the caravan feeling unwell. Wendy helped him get his overall and boots off, and he laid down on his bed, and died. He had a heart attack and was gone in about two minutes. Wendy called the emergencies but it was too late. He was a month short of his 59th birthday.

We heard what had happened within a couple of hours and it was a great shock to us all, as you can imagine. Their son Marcus was on a plane within 3-4 hours, and funeral arrangements were made. We had great difficulty in getting flights out to Ireland at short notice but John & Maureen and son Matthew, Elizabeth & Malcolm, & Jackie and I were able to get to Shannon Airport on Wednesday afterwards, before breakfast, the day before the funeral.

In Ireland they bury the dead very quickly, and Marcus managed to get a one day extension to enable us to get there. He had to dig his fathers grave the custom there.

Mike is buried in a tiny hillside graveyard, miles from anywhere, at Burgess Cemetery, Ballywilliam Church, a magnificent view facing west into the setting sun. A more peaceful place would be difficult to find.

We arrived back home only a few hours after the funeral and we are all finding it hard to believe that our Brother has gone. Wendy intends to sell the land and to buy a small house, with room for her animals as it would be impossible for her to carry on her life where she is now.

Brother John has had a couple more operations for cancer of the bladder, and on the day before we went to Ireland he had had the third of six 'Chemo's'. He is getting over his problem very well and considers it 'done and dusted.', although he was not very well as, expected.

Generation 16 (con't)

In October he is going to China and is determined to be fit for that wonderful experience.

The Fry Family Tree goes on, and we now have 1389 names on it. I want to find out more about the 'Bristol' lot so we may come down to Bristol later on in the year, to dig into the archives of J.S. Fry & Sons again. There is mountains of info. in the Record Office we did not see last time.

As for the 1901, well, nuff said. The enclosed says it all. It still does not work. Love, Jackie & David 2003...30 April...Jackie & I went over to see Wendy and we went up to the grave and cleaned it up and set some flowers in it.
